two or three days of next week apparently interested in "doing will, for all practical purposes, what is best for our State." decide the issues of the 1951 General Assembly.

Unless liberal forces can develop some badly-lacking leadership feating Kerr Scott in every way and coordination of efforts within that period they might as well go on home and let the conservative "hold-the-liners" have the to take over control of the State, legislature to themselves. Because if they don't get organizedand quickly — the conservative group will be able to push through just what it wants.

At the start of the session, the Assembly was split into three camps. They were (1) a small, close-knit group of anti-Scott conservatives pledged to no new taxes and no new spending; (2) a small, loosely-coordinated group of administration-supporting liberals, pledged to a program of what they considered needs for expansion of state services even if several new taxes —or expansion of old ones - were necessary; and (3) the very large group of legis-

Conservative group (1), backed by big business and big lobbyists, had two primary aims - depossible, and lining up support and ammunition for the 1952 gubernatorial campaign in which they hope which they lost with the defeat was only disced and left on the top of Charley Johnson.

Liberal group (2) had as its aims an "expansion of needed services," increasing of appropriations to meet rising costs of operaanother liberal leader in the Governor's Mansion come 1952.

Both of these two groups have been tusseling for control of the third group, made up to a large degree of freshman legislators.

In the Senate the conservatives are fairly well in control. They are led by such high-octane, hotelroom legislating specialists as Rivers Johnson of Duplin, Grady Rankin of Gaston, John Larkins of Youth Council Named Jones and apparently have been receiving at least token aid from By Training Union (Continued on Page 8)

Veteran Learns Value Of Farm Terraces In Training Program

Clyde Garner, a member of the veterans' agricultural training class at the Garner High School, was reared on the flat lands of eastern North Carolina, but he is quite conscious of the erosion on his farm here in Wake County. He terraced some of his land last year and on his tobacco land followed the special string method of laying out rows. Technicians of the Soil Conservation Service assisted him recently in staking out the remainder of his farm. Mr. Garner says that he will start the construction of his terraces soon so that the building will not interfere with his farming this spring.

Several farmers have called to our attention the value of a little mulch on their land in obtaining a stand of pasture grasses this winter. Where land was turned and the organic matter left deep in the round, the small pasture plants had little protection from the cold winds. The reverse was true where the lespedeza or other vegetation of the ground. This thin coverng of organic matter acted as a planket in preventing freezing and tilling of the tender plants.

One side he mulched with pine straw and the other side was left unmulched. Both sides were otherwise treated the same on the same day. They were seeded the first of December. Today the mulched bank is green but the unmulched side has washed with small rivulets leading to the side ditch of the road. The stand of grass is scattering.

Joellen Gill, daughter of Judge and Mrs. Irby D. Gill, is pictured photographer Tommy Bunn in a more flattering pose than that run in the Record a couple of weeks back. Joellen, a Wakelon senior, is shown during the Knightdale contest in the East Wake Tournament. The taller Knightdale girls, in the dark uniforms, gained the jump on Joellen on rare instances. Behind the star forward is Juana Joy Mitchell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Mitchell.
