LIZARD LICK NEWS ITEMS

We sincerely hope no one was misled in the correct time of Hephzibah's Harvest Day. It was Wednesday, October 24th, instead of October 27th as printed in last week's paper.

Pastor Joe Roach and family were away Sunday in one of our pastorates preaching the Homecoming Sermon at Norlina Baptist Church.

Tobacco is selling good so now is a good time to sell your crop. Harvesting of corn and potatoes has to come now before the farmer can say he is ready for the bad winter that is sure to come, according to old proverbs.

This, That & the Other

By Mrs. Theo. B. Davis

In an article telling how he has raised a quarter of a billion dollars for charities Eddie Cantor says: "Service is the rent we pay for our room on earth; and I try to be a good tenant." That fits in nicely with the Rotary motto, "Service above Self." Both are worth memorizing—and practicing.

With sports-writer John Lardner explaining in the American Magazine why he prefers for his son not to be an athlete, "with things as they are at present;" with Blair Cherry, formerly head football coach at the University of Texas, writing a long article for the Saturday Evening Post giving in detail reasons for quitting his job; with The Very Reverend Hunter Guthrie, president of Georgetown University, announcing that his institution is giving up football; it really seems as if this game is more than ever in the minds of people. But not in a way that is at all complimentary. One does not know whether to say football is being debunked or merely demoted. Anyway, the writers agree that alumni of colleges and universities have a baneful influence on the sport.

Well, there are a good many of us who know how to get along without it.

My grandson, Leary, has a specially bad case of poison oak, which led to a most gracious decision by his fourth grade at Wakelon. Leary had been elected "king" of his room in the pre-Halloween contest now raging up there. When he found he would have to miss several days from school, he asked his mother to go tell the teacher, Mrs. Aycock, and the class to choose another in his place, as he would not be able to do any of the work. They sent him word they would work for him. Not for Leary's sake so much as for their loyalty, I am hoping that grade wins, or, at least, makes a good rating.

Several requests have come in for a brown bread recipe. This one is as easy and simple as any I have ever used, and the bread is very good—if you like brown bread. Measure and mix one cupful corn meal, one of whole wheat flour and one of plain white flour. Sift with it one teaspoonful salt, one of baking powder and one of soda. Into two cupfuls of butter-milk, stir six tablespoonfuls of molasses and six tablespoonfuls brown sugar. Pour this into the dry ingredients, stirring well until a thick batter is formed. Lastly add one cupful seedless raisins and one of chopped nuts. (Leave out nuts, if preferred.)

Grease two coffee cans well inside and put half the batter in each. Cover with the can top, which should also be greased. If you have a pressure cooker, place the cans in it and cook for an hour at ten pounds pressure. If you have no pressure cooker, steam the cans in whatever will hold them and has a close-fitting lid; and cook them three hours. No matter which method is used, take off the can lids after the bread is cooked, and dry it in the stove oven for five or ten minutes. Remove the bread from the cans and cool it on a rack.

You may note that no shortening is called for. You will not miss it. Eat the bread with butter, cream cheese, or whatever you want—and can get. It is good lightly toasted. And, since it is a good bit of trouble to go to merely for two loaves of bread, I like to make a real job of it and multiply every item in the recipe by three. This gives six loaves, which allows for dividing with the children. My husband says it tastes like plain fruit cake which is not sweet enough; but the rest rally around till not a slice is ever wasted.

Banker Vance Brown Wants Your Pennies!

A severe shortage of pennies exists in the country, according to R. Vance Brown, cashier of the Zebulon branch of Peoples Bank & Trust Company, who urged the people of this community to hunt up accumulated coppers and exchange them for folding money.

Already emergency calls have come from Raleigh banks for pennies. "Bust that piggy bank with a clear conscience," Vance urged, "because it's patriotic not to save those pennies."
