THE AMERICAN WAY

Loan Fund Is Available For Wake County Farms

Wake County farmers are beginning to take advantage of the Farm Housing loans being made by the Farmers Home Administration, reports A. R. Russell, County Supervisor for Wake County.

These loans are made to eligible farm owners for building new dwellings, modernizing homes already built by installing water systems, bathrooms, or adding extra rooms; constructing new stock barns, milking parlors, tobacco barns, etc.

Credit restrictions must be complied with in erecting new dwellings but do not apply to farm out-buildings or water systems. Repayment can be set up for periods ranging from ten to thirty-three years. The interest rate is 4%. Eight of these loans have been made recently. Two homes have been completed.

All loans must be certified by our County Committee of three practical farmers. Our Committeemen this year are Mr. Sam T. Davis, R-2 Wendell, Mr. Luther J. Clark, R-3 Apex, and Mr. P. Rand Bryan, R-1 Garner, N. C.

Applications for these loans can be made in the Wake County Office of the Farmers Home Administration, Room 231, of the New Wake County Office Building, corner of McDowell and Davis Street, Raleigh, N. C.

Brother Combs Still Has His Corn

Kermit Combs, pastor of Wakefield and Bethany Baptist Churches, reported this week that he has finally mastered the soil in this community after battling it for years. When he first came to Wakefield, he found his garden soil entirely different from any he had tilled before, and most of his gardening efforts produced little but trouble.

This summer, however, the preacher hit on the right combination, and his garden produced so abundantly and so long that this week he is still eating fresh corn, along with plenty of other vegetables.

"The preacher is raising corn for winter," said a member of his congregation. The popular minister emphasized it is not the drinking variety.

Soil Conservation Workers Cite Work of Joe Tippett As Best Way to Use Grass

John F. McBane

S. L. Veazey of Varina says he can save money by using small grains for winter grazing. Believing that it is cheaper to let his livestock do the harvesting, he has top dressed the small grain so as to give some fall and early winter grazing. He will use an electric fence to pasture a corn field and a meadow that is almost knee deep in tall fescue and Ladino clover. This grazing will not hurt the meadow. In fact, it will possibly help it since it has matted down and disease may injure the mixture.

H. M. Olive of New Hill has several acres of rye tall enough now to graze. This rye follows tobacco. Mr. Olive says his pasture is grazed very closely and, consequently, will receive very little grazing during the winter months if it is as cold as it was last year. This field of rye should relieve and save his permanent pasture from being overgrazed.

Last Rites Are Held For Mrs. Pattie Doub Tuesday, November 6

Funeral services for Mrs. Pattie Doub, 82, of Wendell, Route 1, who died at Mary Elizabeth Hospital on Monday morning, were held from the Knightdale Methodist Church at 3 p. m., on Tuesday.

Mrs. Doub, who had been in declining health for several years, was a widow of Landon L. Doub and the daughter of the late Jesse and Mary Anderson of Wendell.

She was an active member of Oak Grove Methodist Church for more than 50 years prior to its merger with the Knightdale Church, of which she was a member at the time of her death.

Surviving are seven children; L. A. Doub, Knightdale; Mrs. M. J. Sexton, Zebulon; Mrs. G. A. Jones, Garner, Miss Pattie Doub, Atlanta, Ga., and Albert Doub, Mrs. J. H. Tucker and Mrs. T. T. Brown, all of Raleigh; ten grandchildren; and six great-grandchildren.

Joe Tippett of Zebulon says he plans to feed his stock rather than overgraze his new pastures and year old pastures. An overgrazed pasture does not furnish more than one half as much grazing as if cattle were kept off a portion of the time so that the grass will be about three to four inches tall at all times.

An overgrazed pasture is hardly more than an exercising lot with the cattle damaging the plants by walking over them. Therefore, one should keep cattle off of permanent pastures this fall and winter, especially when the ground is wet.
