Human Relations Field Discussed By Speaker at Local Rotary Club

The importance of human relations was stressed by Herbert Norton, head of the Carolina Country Club in Raleigh, in an inspirational talk made before the Zebulon Rotary Club last Friday night. Community, state, national, and international conflicts could be solved by good human relations, he said, and he urged that a real attempt be made to understand other people.

One of the most important requisites for good human relations is a smile, Mr. Norton said. "No one is so poor he cannot give a smile away and no one is so rich he does not need a smile," the speaker emphasized.

Mr. Norton has had wide experience in hotel and country club work, which required the constant practice of good human relations.

Jim Fish, recreation director for the community, spoke briefly on the "blooper" softball league being formed for the summer. He asked that the Rotarians form a team to be entered in this league.

Ed Hales was named manager of the Rotary team and requested to attend the organization meeting for the league to be held Monday night.
