Intense mid-summer temperatures slowed the work when crew men began to fall out with heat exhaustion. When the heat broke, the rains came! Swamps turned to quicksand and holes dug for power poles caved in so fast crews were forced to use dynamite.

Poles would be erected above dynamite charges so that when holes were blasted out, the poles would drop into place before the mud and sand closed the hole again.

Around Farmville, soil was so murky that crewmen used a system of setting poles that they called "jetting 'em in." That is, they blasted a hole by using a jet of water below the pole. When the pole settled to the desired depth, the piping was removed.

The J. K. Watsons of New Bern spent the weekend with his parents, the C. M. Watsons. Sunday guests were the Hubert Watsons of Franklinton, the Clarence Watsons of Fayetteville and the Lewis Watsons of Bailey.

they were shooting the shotgun. I had never shot one and was not too eager to try, but Mr. Kinsey finally coaxed me into shooting it. I took the gun, very awkwardly, and Mr. Kinsey showed me how to hold it. When I was ready to shoot I told them to pull. Someone pulled a string that was attached to the machine that shot out the clay pigeons. I was standing in the box ready to aim, but I did not have time. I just shot. It so happened that the shot and the pigeon met. A perfect shot, even if I did not have enough time to aim and so had to hit it by accident.

The bruise where the gun kicked me was not too bad. If it took the bruise for me to experience shooting a shotgun, it was worth it.

Somehow I enjoyed supper a great deal better than I expected to. I guess it was because I had got up enough courage to shoot that shotgun.

It was Thursday that I think I had the most fun of all. We started off on the same routine as before.

Mr. Price took us to see a beaver lodge. This was most interesting to me, because we do not have any beaver around home. Then we went over to see a beaver dam. Mr. Price said they had blown the dam out several times, but the beaver always came back, so now they have just given the swamp to the beaver.

I really enjoyed my week at camp. I think I could not have had a better time doing anything I know of. I learned more in the four days that I stayed at camp than I did in all my studies before I went, I feel sure. I certainly do appreciate the wonderful opportunity of this trip, and I feel that all the other boys and girls that got a chance to go appreciate it as much as I do.

BIG LIFT
to Better Farming

Better farming, new methods and machines, better livestock, and improved marketing are helping bring about a new era of progress and prosperity in Dixie.

Rural telephones (they tripled in number since World War II in the area served by Southern Bell) are bringing a big lift to farm work and farm living. During the first eight months of this year, we installed more than 92,000 rural telephones.

We'll keep on putting them in as fast as we can—because we know how much they mean to prosperity on the farm and in town... and to a strong, well-fed America. More farm telephones also mean more valuable telephone service for everyone.
