RED GROUPE

The term Grouper covers a considerable number of usually superior marine food fishes. The Red Grouper is not considered by some fish specialists to be a true Grouper. Rather it is classed with the Hinds and Cabarillas. The true Groupers are wider between the eyes than the Hinds and Cabrillas and in general are smaller fishes not usually reaching above 40 pounds in weight. The Red Grouper rarely weighs as much as 40 pounds and the usual fish caught by hook and line runs around 1 to 5 pounds.

The Red Grouper, like its relatives, has the habit of diving into obstructions when it is hooked. Frequently this results in a cut line and freedom for the fish. The Red Grouper does not occur in schools as do some of its relatives. The fish is a poor fighter and slow in its actions but the flesh is excellent and the animals bring a good price in commercial markets. Commercial harvesting of Red Groupers is common in the fishing banks off the west coast of Florida. The method followed is using a hook and line and a piece of fish as bait. Normal diet of the Red Grouper includes molluscs, crustaceans and fish. The food is taken in day or night.

Red Groupers range from New England to the West Indies and are possibly most abundant in shallow waters over coral around the Florida Keys. They are well known for their ability to live some hours out of water.

The Red Grouper grows to a length of 3 feet. It is basically brownish but often mottled with indistinct darker spots. There are however about the eyes definite darker spots. At the base of the tail there seems to be a series of obscure saddle-like patches.

The fins including the tail are colored essentially like the remainder of the fish except that there sometimes seems to be an obscure, dark band running horizontally along the back fin and there may be dark or light margins along the edges of the paired fins. The head is large and bears a correspondingly large mouth. The fins are all relatively large and do not indicate any ability to swim rapidly. The end of the tail is straight or slightly concave in outline.

such a varied and valuable program."

Sloan, who is also secretary of Farm and Home Week and in charge of program planning for the State College Extension Service, announced a program that includes:

The world famed 82nd Airborne Band; square dance team from the Southern Appalachians; nightly musical programs and participation in games that have proven popular with farm groups in the past; the nationally known 200-voice massed chorus of the North Carolina Home Demonstration Clubs.

Also such speakers as J. Earl Cooke, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture; Mrs. Ivy Baker Priest, the Treasurer of the United States; and D. S. Weaver, director of the Extension Service.

And the 50th anniversary celebration of the Agricultural Extension Service. This will bring back to North Carolina such persons who laid the foundation for present day Extension as Mrs. Lucille Kennett Bagley, first home demonstration agent in North Carolina. Others to be present for this celebration include former Governor and former County Agent W. Kerr Scott; Mrs. Eugenia Van Landingham, national president the Home Agents Association; also Bobby Parker of Macclesfield, outstanding 4-H'er who will go to Ireland as an International Farm Youth Exchange delegate this summer; Commissioner of Agriculture L. Y. Balentine; and Dr. I. O. Schaub, a pioneer in progressive farming who has served as dean of agriculture at State College and Director of the Extension Service.

Card of Thanks

Words can not express the joy and pleasure we got from the beautiful cards and letters, flowers and potted plants, and above all your visits and prayers. We had five preachers come in one day and prayed lovely prayers for us. My mother was in a serious condition at first, but she soon snapped out of it, and was like a child at Christmas when the mail came in. She loves her cards and still enjoys them. We both thank each and every one for each and every one for each deed of kindness. We love you everyone.

Respectfully,
Mrs. Vera Rhodes

Playing were the Ben Thomases, Dave Finches, Ferd Davises and Fred Smiths.

Lettuce News

North Carolina's 1953 lettuce production is currently estimated at 195,000 crates (4 to 6 doz.) If this holds true production will be the greatest since 1931 when 201,000 crates were produced.
