MIDDLESEX SCHOOL NEWS

By Dallas Mallison

The most outstanding event of the past week at Middlesex High School was the visit of C. C. Brown, Director of Transportation with the State Department of Public Instruction.

Mr. Brown made an address before the school's Safety Club and inspected the method employed in dispatching school buses and other vehicles leaving the campus.

Principal Julian W. O'Neal has developed a very elaborate and effective system with safety patrol leaders, teach supervision, and his own supervision. Under this system there has been no accidents of any kind, following the sad incident several years ago when several Middlesex school children lost their lives as a result of a very severe accident in the Ferrells area.

Brown said that he planned to return next fall and make a series of moving pictures showing the local system in operation.

Members of the local high school faculty have been studying the subject of "Driver Education" for the past several weeks at Nashville.

Coach Carroll W. Wilson and Jake H. Wright, Jr., mathematics instructor, are now completing a formal course in the subject taught by members of the State Department of Education and the Highway Safety Division.

Many parties were held last week observing the close of school. These were both in the grammar grades and the high school.

On Tuesday, Coach Carroll Wilson's tenth graders went to Wilson where in a park there they enjoyed a wiener roast.

Friday the Beta Club made a trip to Lake Glad near Wendell where they staged their annual outing.

On Monday of this week the Junior Class went to Pullen Park in Raleigh for their annual party.

Whitley Declares Zebulon's Future Lies with Children

Zebulon's future is based on "our ability to develop the youth of our country and community," C. V. Whitley told Zebulon Rotarians last Friday evening. "Our Christian responsibility is to shoulder the burden of developing our youth," he said.

Mr. Whitley stressed the importance of the community park, saying "it is thrilling to watch children play."

He urged that the park be developed and that supervised recreation be provided for the young people.

This community needs a community building, he stressed, and an adequate library and extended playground equipment.

He said that thus far we have failed to provide a community building by appointing a committee and putting the burden on a few people.

Here he suggested that the only way to develop our youth is to raise the tax rate 65 cents, even if for a limited time, to get contributions from everyone for the work.

Such a tax would be nothing to be ashamed of, he said, because the community could show what the taxes are for. The added tax would not be too much for what the community would receive, he added.

$13,000 per Year

A question and answer discussion followed the talk. It was figured that the 65 cents added tax would bring in $13,000 in revenue annually. "This is the only way everybody will contribute," Town Commissioner Howard Beck commented.

The continuing discussion revealed some believe the idea of the special tax would hurt no one's platform and would lift a heavy burden off committees now saddled with the responsibility of planning a community building and supervising a recreation program with limited funds.

Consensus was that all people who contributed to get a factory building for the community would not give money for a community building.

Ralph Talton, chairman of the Recreation Commission, said that this summer 90 percent of the budget for the recreation program will be spent for the children from four to nine years of age.

The program was interesting and the idea of a special tax incited spirited comment.

Visitors at the meeting were Sam Anderson and Swade Barbour of Clayton.
