Sgt. Billy J. Bailey and Cpl. James Bailey, unrelated, were helping evacuate belongings from burning buildings when they heard cries from two children trapped in one of the houses.

The two four-year-olds, a boy and a girl named Yoshizi Shibuyo and Yoko Ohara, apparently had fled from a top floor, but were blocked by a locked door.

The incident came to light when witnesses reported it to Capt. Eugene T. Carson, commander of the 545th MP Co.

Carson said he has recommended the Baileys for the Soldier's Medal, the highest military award for bravery in peacetime.
