State Leaders Are Heard by Club; Other Units Meet

A confident, assured, poignant devotional, given by Mrs. J. Wilbur Bunn of Raleigh, opened the February meeting of the Zebulon Senior Woman's Club last Tuesday afternoon in Mrs. Irby Gill's home.

Mrs. Edwin P. Brown, Tuesday speaker, referred to the State Woman's Club Convention to be held in Greensboro April 26, 27 and 28, when plans will be developed concerning schools for retarded children in the state.

These plans are in the hearts of every club woman of the state, she declared.

Mrs. Brown mentioned the Fine Arts meeting in the summer at Brevard, and asked that vacations be planned in accordance with the time of that meeting.

She finished by stressing the importance of leadership for a growing club.

After the speech Mrs. Gill, assisted by Mrs. L. M. Massey and Mrs. W. O. Glover, served ham sandwiches, cookies and punch to the twenty-five members who attended the meeting.

Girl Scouts Meet

A Juliette Low program, designed to give each Girl Scout a part in the restoration of the Juliette Low home in Savannah, Ga., was presented by the Girl Scouts of Zebulon in the Wakelon School auditorium last Wednesday night. Juliette Low was the founder of the Girl Scouts.

Her home in Savannah is 125 years old and was purchased recently by the Girl Scouts of America. It will be made a national girl scout center.

Boy Scouts Camp

The intense cold last weekend did not prevent the Zebulon Boy Scout troop from going to Camp Durant.

Plans had been made to organize an explorer's unit there and field day exercises were scheduled for Sunday afternoon.

But with temperatures well below freezing all this was impossible.

Practice in combating the cold was about all that could be accomplished.

Twelve scouts made the trip to Durant.

By Dr. L. M. Massey

The final reports have been made in the local campaign in support of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis. Wakelon High School made an excellent drive and the Mothers' March was very successful. Together with the other schools and other group captains, the total was a successful completion to the over-all effort of a great number of people participating in the work to support this important movement.

The total contributions from all sources amounted to $1,160.26. It is being forwarded to the county chairman who will make his return to the state chairman for the final accounting for the State.

Franklin Jones, Mrs. Braxton Eddins, Principal Garland Crews and Mrs. Norman Screws, wish to express their appreciation to all concerned for making possible the successful drive in eastern Wake County.

Dr. J. A. Easley Addresses Local Gardeners on Culture of Camellias

Dr. J. A. Easley of Wake Forest, former president of the North Carolina Camellia Society, spoke Monday night to the Garden Club on "Camellias." In an informal and interesting manner, he told of the proper care of Camellias; selecting the plant, the proper method of planting, fertilization, cutting the blossoms, watering, and spraying.

He urged that before buying a plant, decide whether you want it for the blossom for corsages and cutting, or for its landscaping value.

Sweet Potatoes, Other Vegetables Are FB Topics

By Hunter James

Farmers are planning to use less land for tobacco, cotton and wheat this year and more for the growth of vegetables and potatoes, State College specialists declared Monday night.

The Zebulon unit of the Wake County Farm Bureau met Monday night at Wakelon School to hear Henry Covington and Dr. George Abshier, both of N. C. State College, speak on growth of vegetables and potatoes for the new produce market in Raleigh.

Mr. Covington is a specialist in vegetable growth, and Dr. Abshier is a potato expert.

Since federal allotments for tobacco, cotton and wheat have been cut 5% this year, there will be much good excess land and farmers are planning other crops to make use of it, they said.

Sweet Potato Possibility

Apart from these plans a proposal — that farmers in this vicinity grow sweet potatoes as another means of utilizing their surplus land — was announced by Robert Edd Horton, local Farm Bureau Secretary, who presided over the Monday night meeting in the absence of President R. C. McNabb and Vice-president Wiley G. Broughton.

F. D. Finch, local attorney and operator of the Wakelon Trading Co., made the suggestion and offered to provide storage space for curing sweet potatoes if farmers are willing to grow them.

Mr. Horton appointed Dewey W. Massey, Raymond Averette, Rex Tippet and Elmo Finch as a committee to study all aspects of the proposal and make recommendations at the next regular Bureau meeting.

Vegetable Program

While this proposal for a sweet potato warehouse here is a possibility, the plans for vegetable and Irish potato growth and marketing in this area have been under way for some time.

Mr. Covington and Dr. Abshier pointed out Monday night the advantages of such a market but added that, since vegetables have never been grown here for organized marketing before, mistakes are likely.

Much care will be necessary if they are to be avoided and if produce is to maintain a premium value on the new Raleigh market, they said.

Approximately seventy-five people attended the Monday night meeting.

varieties which he has found satisfactory to be grown outside, which will stand our cold winters and dry summers.

The meeting was held in the home of Mrs. Ed Hales, with Mrs. Ben Thomas, associate hostess. Following the program, the hostesses served delicious refreshments of cherry tarts, chicken salad sandwiches, pickle, valentine candy and coffee.

Dr. Easley was accompanied by his wife. Visitors to the meeting were Mrs. Julian Horton and Mrs. Loomis Strickland.
