

"Village Smithy" Is True Scot

If the village blacksmith in Olney, Maryland, resembles the Scotsman on the Savings Bond poster above, it's more than just a coincidence. They're one and the same. When Artist Gib Crockett selected the thrift theme for his Savings Bond poster, he chose as his model 70-year-old Samuel Josiah Finneyfrock, a true Scotsman who plies his trade in the little Maryland town just 18 miles north of the White House. A blacksmith who hasn't shod a horse in 16 years, Mr. Finneyfrock nevertheless keeps busy at his forge making chimney initials and other ornaments for homeowners, repairing machinery, and otherwise serving as handyman for the neighborhood. One of the few old-time "village smithies" left in the United States, he observes: "No, I don't have a spreading chestnut tree to work under. A blight killed them all around here 40 years ago." Mr. Finneyfrock not only has contributed his smiling countenance to the nation-wide promotion of Savings Bonds, but he also is a regular purchaser of what he calls his "good, safe investment." The poster is now being widely displayed all over the country.

Austin Farms Is New Corporation

A new corporation, Austin Farms, Incorporated, has been organized with its principal office in Wendell and with its principal corporate purpose the processing and wholesaling of poultry.

The corporation, which already has had about $85,000 worth of stock subscribed, will be headed by Austin Williams, veteran poultry dealer whose facilities will be taken over by the new firm.

Chief assistant to Mr. Williams will be Colonel Ray Whitley of Wendell, who recently ended a tour of duty with the U. S. Air Force in order to become associated with the new firm.

An explanatory meeting was held two weeks ago in the Wendell town hall, at which time the aims of the poultry firm were explained. The company hopes to put about $85,000 a week into circulation in the Zebulon-Wendell area.

Following is a summation of the prospectus that is being distributed for the new corporation:

Austin Farms, previously solely owned by Austin Williams, hopes by incorporation to greatly increase its volume of poultry business.

The company was officially incorporated March 4, 1955, and has been authorized to issue 1500 shares of common stock and 1000 shares of preferred stock.

Five hundred shares of preferred stock will be held in reserve by the Board of Directors, which are to be elected by stockholders, until they see fit to authorize issuance.

Zebulon and Wendell residents will have priority in the purchase of stock.

Proceeds from the sale of both common and preferred stock, par value of which is $100 a share, will be used for construction of a new plant and office building, for equipment and land and for operating capital. The new office building will have 20,000 square feet of floor space.

These plans will go into effect after purchase by the corporation of Mr. Williams' poultry processing business.

While the most significant source of live poultry in this area at the present time is in Chatham County, the management of the corporation hopes to stimulate production in the Raleigh, Wendell and Zebulon area, inasmuch as expansion will include operation of a hatchery and a chicken feed and equipment business in addition to the processing plant.

The hatchery will occupy the building that is currently being used for poultry processing.

Mr. Williams has in the past been selling directly to retail grocers and wholesalers in eastern North Carolina and Virginia.

But with increased facilities the corporation hopes to expand into a larger marketing area — Philadelphia, New York, Chicago or Detroit.

Distribution will be made by corporation trucks.
