Farmers Market Now Open

The Raleigh Farmers Market has a retail shed that is opening up for farmers on Saturdays at the present time, according to Jim Graham, Manager of the Market. He stated that when local produce was more in season, this shed could be opened every day.

Mr. Graham reported that the shed was for retailing and that any farmers interested in selling some of his or his neighbors could rent the stalls by the day or by the month and he also welcomes any people who would like to come in and buy fresh produce.

G. W. Miller, Jr., County Agent states that he thinks that the market has the facilities to meet every person's needs from the housewife to the wholesale buyer and seller and that all farmers were welcome to visit this facility and inquire as to where they can fit into the market picture.

Mr. Graham also reported that there was a place for larger growers to wholesale their produce to store buyers and that the majority of the business was carried on from 3:00-6:00 in the morning.

A driver violation was noted in 57 per cent of the fatal auto smash ups in North Carolina last year. It means, according to a Motor Vehicles Department study, that well over half of the drivers involved in death-dealing accidents were acting unlawfully, unsafely and unwisely at the time death struck.

Road and vehicle defects accounted for six per cent of the fatal crashes.
