Interior Decorator Gives Advice to Housewives

One of the greatest mistakes made by the housewife in decorating her home or apartment is that she does it without a definite plan, and as a result the home lacks unity.

This statement was made by Robert Hester, interior decorator and instructor at the Richmond Professional Institute.

Hester is a graduate of the Parsons School of Interior Decorating in New York, and was here on a visit with his sister, Mrs. Sidney Eddins, when he was interviewed.

He said that in decorating you should consider principally the people who will occupy the house the most.

"The epitome of excellent decorating is simplicity," Hester said.

He cautioned the housewife to "under decorate" rather than "over decorate."

Hester said that in the conventional or traditional home there is very little reason to alternate the colors in a room. He said too many

Zebulon Guard Unit At Fort Bragg for Next Two Weeks

By CWO Johnsey P. Arnold

The six officers and 80 enlisted men of Battery A, 113th FA Battalion, arrived at Fort Bragg on Sunday at 10:30 a.m. Immediately work was begun in setting up the unit for operation and training under the expert supervision of 1st Sgt. Sidney F. Holmes. By nightfall on Sunday, everything had been shined and polished and ready for training.

On Monday morning, training commenced preparing on service practices on the range next week.

Monday night a softball game was scheduled between Battery A and Battery B, 113 FA Bn. Btry B conceded early in the day, and Battery A played Service Btry, 113th. The outcome of the game was almost heart-breaking for at the end of 6 full innings of play Btry A, behind the very capable pitching of Pfc. Benjamin W. Mitchell, led by a score of 4 to 1. At this point in the game a part of our second team went into the field.

With a couple of errors and the only hit given up by Pfc. Mitchell during the entire game, we lost by the score of 6 to 5. This eliminated Btry A from further tournament play, but we are still available for any scheduled game of softball,

FIRST BUILT-IN OVEN IN ZEBULON

Goodwins Like Built-in Oven; A First for Local Community

"I like it because you don't have to stoop and bend," Mrs. Ray Goodwin said.

Mrs. Goodwin was talking about the General Electric built-in oven unit she and husband Ray have installed in the beautiful knotty pine kitchen of their new home.

This type oven is the first to have been installed in Zebulon.

"It is far superior to any oven I have ever seen or used," Mrs. Goodwin said. "I thought that gas cooked fast, but this oven has got even gas beat."

The oversized oven is set at arm level in the knotty pine cabinets that surround a part of the Goodwin kitchen. The exterior is brown, matching the dark knots in the panelling. It has a light gray interior.

Mrs. Goodwin had misgivings about installing such an oven in the beginning. She became acquainted with them through reading women's magazines.

"Even after Ray and I decided to have one installed, I still wasn't too sold on the idea," she said.

This oven is operated with completely automatic controls.

Built into the cabinet top beside the oven are staggered GE surface units. This, too, is another first. An instrument panel set below has push button controls.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Goodwin said they welcome anybody who is contemplating installing such a cooking unit to come and see theirs.
