CANDIDATES READ WELL

Housewives Want Action

Mrs. Bob Sawyer: "I would like very much to have the speeding traffic eliminated from Church Street. This street is commonly known to the neighbors as a 'speedway.' Many children use this street to go to school and the speeding traffic endangers their lives."

Mrs. W. A. Allman: "I would like more gutters to carry away the surface water. Every time it rains we in our section are flooded and the surface water washes and makes havoc of our yards. I believe, too, that if the ditches were kept properly by the town we would not have so much trouble with surface water."

Mrs. Eldred Rountree: "I beg of

Mayor Unopposed; Ten File For Commissioners Race

The town of Zebulon is experiencing one of its quietest pre-election campaigns in many years.

There are no real issues at stake, and the candidates have stirred up none.

No commitments have been made by any of the candidates and none is likely to be made since the race is not a heated one.

What campaigning has been done has been carried on very quietly and without fanfare on the part of the candidates.

Four persons who have filed for a seat on the Town Board are novices in the field of politics. These new comers are P. Craven Brown, B. R. Phillips, Thomas Monk, and Raymond Pippin.

Brown, a retired traveling salesman, is at present farming outside of town; Phillips is a retired merchant and farmer; Monk is head of a wholesale electrical and plumbing supply house; and Pippin owns and operates a large farm near Zebulon.

Trying for a second time for a seat on the Town Board is a woman. Mrs. Elizabeth Ellett, who was defeated by a small margin in the 1955 town election, has entered the political field again.

Mrs. Ellett is the only woman
