Post Office Loses First Class Rating Held for One Year

Zebulon Post Office lost its first class rating Monday.

Postmaster M. J. Sexton made the announcement after receiving orders from U. S. postal authorities in Washington, D. C.

The local post office reverted to a second class institution because of the lossage of parcel post receipts.

When the gross parcel post receipts of a post office totals $40,000 or more, it can be put in the first class bracket.

In the fiscal year 1955-56 Zebulon Post Office crossed the $40,000-a-year mark and was automatically put in the first class category.

According to Postmaster Sexton gross receipts from the 1956-57 fiscal year were about $39,240.

The local post office's first class position was gained because of the heavy volume of parcels shipped by the local Devil Dog Manufacturing Company.

The local manufacturing company boosted the postal receipts, causing the local post office to gain its first class status, Postmaster Sexton said.
