Gov. Luther H. Hodges arrived 15 minutes late for the Lions Club building dedication. He explained he couldn't get here earlier and that it had been a "rough week" for him. That afternoon he had been in Durham speech-making, and he had come back by his office because he had some mail he had to "get out of the way." Then he stopped by the Mansion to freshen up a bit, and rushed down for the dedication ceremonies.

Governor Hodges, commenting after Lion H. A. Hodge, Jr. had introduced North Carolina's Chief Executive, said: "I suppose if in Mr. Hodge's family there had been more of them they would have put an S on them, too. There were nine in my immediate family so we had to make it plural."

"Of course, I haven't been here long enough and I haven't had a chance to see this charming lady, Mrs. Kemp, but I have met this guy," the Governor said, gesturing to Lion Frank Kemp, "and how in the world he ever fooled her, I don't know."

The Governor's joke: There was a man 68-years-old and his wife had been dead for just about 14 months when he decided to marry a girl 28. He had two daughters, each over 40, and they wanted to keep dad from marrying. So they went to see a neighbor and said, "Mr. Jones, would you mind seeing our daddy about this marrying. It's just worrying us to death." And so the old man did and said, "John, I don't understand what in the world a man like you-68 years of age-marrying a girl 28. It ain't even good arithmetic, doesn't make any sense." The old man said, "You stay out of this. For 24 years before Mary died every time I opened the bedroom door I smelled liniment, and now I want to smell cologne."

The Governor's idea about the present recession period. He said he "thinks that if people would quit talking about how bad things are they would be twice as good as they think they are."

Governor Hodges is a Rotarian, but he added that he is an honorary member of the Lions and is "very proud of the honor. I must take my hat off to the many things you (the Lions) have done."

Even though he arrived too late to eat the delicious baked young chicken dinner (he said he had had his dinner), the Governor did partake of the dessert of ice cream and cake.

The Governor was wearing a navy flannel suit, white shirt and dark four-in-hand tie, according to those sitting near him-although none of these people seemed too perceptive. A beautiful white carnation graced the left lapel of his suit.

Mrs. Nelle Kemp's solos entranced the guests. Her rendition of two light classics, "A Birthday" and "The Little Shepherd's Song," were done flawlessly, with striking boldness in the top register, yet never losing their quality. "Bless This House" was also done with excellence and a spirit of prayerfulness. Mrs. Kemp has brought untold honor to the Lions and they express themselves as being deeply appreciative.

Can't fail to mention Mrs. Kemp's accompanist, Miss Carolyn Hinton. As ever, she played without error and with ease and grace.

The Harold Green orchestra, augmented with Wakelon School band director Herbert Ireland and ex-directors Sinclair Newman and Alger Batts, never played more beautifully for the dance. They exhibited a very professional quality, in both music and their dress of white dinner jackets.

Seems Mrs. Ben Thomas was worried about The Record's reporter during the Governor's speech, and remarked to her dinner companions that he must be having a terrible time taking down the speech as fast as the Chief Executive was going. What Mrs. Thomas didn't know was that the reporter was doing things the easy way that night and had a tape recorder all set up at the Governor's table. But, oh, Mrs. Thomas, the transcribing! That was the job.

Never saw such beautiful and handsome ladies who attended the ceremonies. Two of the prettiest were the mayor's wife and the wife of the president of the Lions Club. Mrs. Debnam, wife of the mayor, was dressed in a powder blue sheath that had a satin thread running through it outlining a flower design. Across her petite shoulders was thrown a threecornered white woolen shawl. She wore white elbow-length gloves. Mrs. Hinton, wife of the president of the club, was gowned in an Italian silk sheath, navy colored. She wore no accessories.

Mrs. Hodges, who, it was reported, had planned to accompany the Governor to the ceremonies, called the trip off. No explanation was given. One Lioness wondered if she had mumps. This Lioness possibly had such a thought because mumps were uppermost in her mind, as it has been with a great many of the mothers of Zebulon this winter.

Distinguished guests at the Lions Club building dedication were Superior Court Judge of Wake County William Y. Bickett and Mrs. Bickett, Solicitor of Wake County Superior Court Lester Chalmers and Mrs. Chalmers, Wake County Sheriff Robert Pleasants, Officer for Wake County Court of Domestic Relations Graham Bunn, Superintendent of Buildings and Grounds for the North Carolina State Capitol George Cherry, R. Lion Hardin Hinton Accepts Club Keys

Lion President Hardin Hinton presented the following speech when he accepted the keys of the Zebulon Lion Club building at the dedication ceremonies, Friday night, March 21. The keys were presented to the president of the club by Lion Thurman Hepler, chairman of the building commit-

As president of the Zebulon Lions Club, I respectfully accept the keys to this club house. In accepting these keys I do so as a token of the trust committed to us by God, our community, and Lionism.

These walls of mortar and stone are erected for a high and sacred purpose. That purpose is service to others through Lionism. This club house stands as a symbol in the midst of the community of Zebulon.

A symbol of fraternity of men. A symbol of unselfish dedication of the membership to render civic and national service.

In the name of the Zebulon Lions Club, I therefore accept these keys and pledge myself to lead and preside over the work that goes out from this house.

These keys stand for a forward program in Zebulon by the Lions. No occasion must be allowed to bar us from carrying through in our march for progress.

The building of this house was done voluntarily by the total membership and each of us has the charge laid upon us now to not look back less the fate of Lot's wife be meted out to us and we become a lump of salt instead of a candle upon a stand.

These keys can unlock the doors of need of many desperate people. As we use them to open the doors of this club house, may we enter each time with a fresh determination to strive unceasingly to use our resources to make other lives

I now accept these keys in tribute to every member's sacrificial effort to make our club house a reality. In recognition of every committee, every past president and officer, and those who actually labored to build this house, I gladly honor these keys.

The dance couldn't have been better. Like the garnishment on an exquisite dessert, it topped off the evening in fine style.

Overheard some Lions and their spouses from out of town comment that "the Zebulon Lions really know how to do things."

Dog Vaccination Dates Set; May 1 - April 31

The State law provides that an opportunity be given all dog owners each year between April 1 and May 31 to have their dogs vaccinated against rabies.

The Wake County Board of Health passed Rules and Regulations approving chick-embryo vaccine to be given once every three years when administered by a licensed veterinarian.

Dog owners should understand that dogs vaccinated with chickembryo by a veterinarian in 1956 and 1957 will not be required to have them vaccinated in 1958. Records of vaccinations are on file in the Wake County Health Department office.

To control rabies, we must enforce compulsory impounding of stray and unwanted dogs and vaccination with chick-embryo rabies vaccine of valuable dogs to be cared for by owners.

A charge of $1.00 will be made for each dog vaccinated.

The following are the dates, places and hours.

April 3, Zebulon Town Hall, Zebulon, 5 to 7 p.m.

April 3, Gay's Store, U.S. 64, 5 to 6 p.m.

April 3, Wakefield Grocery and Market, 6 to 7 p.m.

April 4, Hopkins Cross Roads, 5 to 6 p.m. April 10, Horton's Store at Riley

Hill School, 5 to 6 p.m. April 10, Cary Robertson's Store, 6 to 7 p.m.

May 22, Wendell Town Hall, Wendell, 6 to 7 p.m.

called" Soil Bank Program "one of the most amazing examples of Republican double-talk with the respect to the American farmer."

He said that much of the declining economic position of the farmer has been brought on by Republican policies.

The Governor said that he urges farmers to stay on the land and to supplement their farm income in various ways, including the raising of more poultry and livestock, more truck crops, beginning local processing plants. raising more of their own food, giving more attention to soil and water conservation, more emphasis on forestry, as well as working part time in industry.

in progress in the laboratories of Duke, University of North Carolina, and N. C. State College. A featured item will be an address by Dr. Edward Teller, distinguished nuclear physicist of the University of California.

The general theme of the sessions will be "Science in the Making - Research in Progress." The Symposium has two main objectives: to promote and popularize the study of mathematics and science at the high school level, and to bring prestige to high school students who have shown ability or aptitude for research in science and engineering. The idea of this sort of meeting grew out of an awareness of the need in America for local activities designed to promote science and science-interest at the high school level.

The Zebulon Rotary Club is one of sixty Rotary Clubs in North Carolina participating in the selection of participants to attend the Symposium. These will travel to the Symposium in private autos and will use these cars to move among the three campuses. Each group of students will be under the chaperonage of a teacher of mathematics or science. The participants will be housed at Duke, the University of North Carolina, and North Carolina State College. The expenses of housing, meals, transportation and speakers will be met by the Office of Ordnance Re-
