

Director of Nurses Named For Local Branch Hospital

The first person employed for Wendell-Zebulon Hospital has been named. Frank Ceruzzi, branch hospital administrator, said yesterday Mrs. Mary Temple will be director of nurses.

Mrs. Temple, when interviewed, said, "I am delighted to be working for and with the local hospital. It will be a joy to get back into the profession again."

Ceruzzi said Mrs. Temple will be the unit supervisor in charge of nursing and other key personnel.

"She will be directly responsible for nursing procedure, selection of nursing personnel and will be working closely with the medical staff," Ceruzzi said.

Ceruzzi said Mrs. Temple may do a small amount of nursing if the occasion demands, but she will be wholly responsible for the organization of nursing procedure.

This pretty young matron with a quick, engaging smile hails from the state of Maryland. She was born in Barclay, Md., in 1920. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Wallace, and she is the youngest of three children. There is an older brother and sister.

After graduating from Sadler-ville High School, she attended the University of Maryland. From there she went to the Maryland General Hospital School of Nursing, graduating in 1942 with an R. N. degree.

Her first job was with the Kernan Hospital in Baltimore, an orthopedic hospital. She said this was one of the most interesting and most fascinating nursing duties she has ever had.

helpless children. If grown-ups only had half the courage, faith and hope children suffering with orthopedic diseases have, things would be a great deal better, she said. She found working with them inspiring.

After she came to North Carolina as the wife of George Henry Temple, whom she met while he was in service during World War II and was stationed in the Baltimore area, she became director of nurses at Mary Elizabeth Hospital in Raleigh. She held this position for one and a half years.

Mr. and Mrs. Temple were married August 15, 1942. They are the parents of two children, Vickie and Henry.

Mother's March

The Mother's March of Dimes campaign is set for Tuesday night, January 31, Mrs. Ben Thomas, chairman of the drive, has announced.

Mrs. Thomas has asked that all who wish to contribute to the march to have their porch light turned on and the dogs on the inside.

She said there will be no questionnaire to be filled out as there was last year. There, however, will be a short quiz which will take a minute.

All solicitors will be identified by a ribbon, Mrs. Thomas said.

Last year the Mother's March netted more than $400, and Mrs. Thomas said they hope to surpass that goal this year.

Solicitors will present the facts about some of the terrible crippling diseases that afflict so many children which are birth defects, arthritis, which is actually America's number one crippling disease, and polio, which is still a major problem in spite of the vaccine developed by your March of Dimes.

Millions of children still have not been vaccinated but you can help prevent these crippling diseases when the Mother's March volunteer calls on you. Please say yes. Welcome her with your dimes and dollars for the 1961 March of Dimes.

Four youths were given preliminary hearings in Middlesex Recorder's Court Wednesday, January 18, on break-in charges and bound over to Nash Superior Court under a $300 bond each.

Nash Deputy Frank Brown said Henry Wilson, 20, of Route 3, Zebulon; Oscar W. Perry, Jr., 19, of Route 2, Wendell; Randy Jones, 19, of Zebulon; and Wilbur Batten, 17, of Route 1, Middlesex, were charged with the theft of a crate of soft drinks and two and a half cases of beer from Rock Side Grill, located one mile west of Middlesex, and the theft of a crate of chickens from outside Russell's Restaurant near Zebulon. The thefts occurred Wednesday night, January 11.

Middlesex Police Chief Gilliam discovered the grill break-in around 1 o'clock that night and arrested the youths a short time later. Brown said the foursome was returning to the grill to "finish cleaning it out."

Two cases of beer were carried to Wilson's home and left in a tobacco barn and the half-case was hidden in a washing machine at Perry's house, the deputy reported. He said the group had planned to cook the chickens at Perry's home, but the electricity was off.

The youths pulled weather boarding off the back of the building to gain entrance, Brown said.

Wilson is also charged with entering the grill last October 6 and taking six and a half cases of beer, Brown reported.

J. L. McGee operates the grill.

Couple Enjoy Inaugural Affairs

Mr. and Mrs. John Hilliard attended the inauguration ceremonies of President John Kennedy in Washington.

"We had a very fine time," they said, despite the very inclement weather.

Mr. and Mrs. Hilliard were guests of F. X. Donaldson, Sr., United Press White House correspondent for the past 39 years.

The couple sat in the TV and press section and watched the swearing-in ceremonies on the East front of the Capitol.

"We had a perfect vantage point," Mrs. Hilliard said. "We could see everything that was going on."

Sitting right in front of them was TV and stage star Arlene Francis and behind them was Walter Cronkite, well-known television news commentator.

Others from Zebulon attending the inauguration ceremonies were Mrs. Ruth Chamblee, Diana, Wade Privette and Mrs. Russell Williams. Mrs. Chamblee presented her views to her listening audience on Radio Station WETC this week.

The couple watched the parade from the steps of the capitol. They found this a very good location and could see all that was going on.

"We couldn't see the floats so well because they made a turn in the opposite direction," Mr. Hilliard said. "But everything else was very fine."

They were on the second balcony of the Capitol and Mrs. Hilliard said the President passed about 30 feet from them.

"We were close enough to see the President's red nose," Mrs. Hilliard laughed. "And I mean he had a red one. It looked like it was frozen."

The weather was very cold and the wind was biting. Many people viewed the proceedings inside from windows or looked at it on television. Not Mr. and Mrs. Hilliard. They braved the elements for the whole thing.

Mr. and Mrs. Hilliard had lunch in the White House. They went to the Senate sandwich bar and had hamburgers and steak sandwiches. These they ate while watching the television luncheon of the President.

The couple attended one of the five inaugural balls held in Washington. They went to the ball held in the Statler hotel.

"But it was so crowded that you couldn't move on the dance floor," they said. "We just gave up and went to the lounge and watched television and met and talked to people."

They missed the breakfast held early that morning for the North Carolinians.

Mr. and Mrs. Hilliard did not stay in Washington. They motored to Baltimore. When they got there, there was a 12-inch snow on the ground. Driving was very difficult, but they did not have any accidents, although they saw many along the way.

They used the train to commute back and forth to Washington for the festivities. One morning their car wouldn't budge so they hitchhiked to the railroad station.

"Sure, we did," Mrs. Hilliard said, laughing. "We went out to the street and I began thumbing and throwing out an uncovered knee. Finally, some one came along and gave us a ride to the train station."

Mr. Hilliard said two amusing things happened to them while attending the inaugural ceremonies. Two cab drivers they used were natives of North Carolina. "One had formerly lived in the Peaces community and Youngs-ville. In our conversation, I found that he didn't remember anybody that I was familiar with. But he was very familiar with the late Deputy Sheriff G. C. Massey."

Mrs. Hilliard wore an off-shoulder gold satin brocade evening gown with gold accessories and long white gloves.

"It was cold, messy and difficult to get to and from your destinations," they chimed, "but it was worth it. The spectacle of the occasion was great. We wouldn't have missed it for anything."
