Wendell Native Is Hospital Bookkeeper

Mrs. Josephine Knott was employed as cashier, admitting officer and bookkeeper of Wendell-Zebulon Branch Hospital February 27.

Mrs. Knott, 32, is the oldest of four children of Mrs. Jim Coley of Wendell and the late Mr. Coley. She is a graduate of Knightdale High School.

Prior to accepting a position with the local hospital she was employed with the Compensation Rating Bureau and was receptionist of the Wake County Health Department of Raleigh.

She is a member of Wendell Baptist Church and is active in the religious organizations of her church. She is assistant Sunday School teacher of the Eureka Couples Class.

Her hobbies are reading, dancing and sports. "Just simple pleasures," she said. "But I have no time for hobbies, really."

She is married to Charles Knott, who is parts manager of R&W Pontiac Co. of Wendell. They are the parents of two children, Irlie Lee, 7, and Allen, 3. The family resides on Wilson Avenue, Wendell.

Over 200 people, including three physicians from outlying areas turned out last Thursday night at the Middlesex School auditorium to listen and talk about a subject vital to them—that of securing a doctor to attend the people of Middlesex and the surrounding areas, which has been without a doctor since the death of Dr. E. C. Powell in 1959.

The chief attraction of this particular night was Norman H. Davis, director of the Medical Program of the Sears-Roebuck Foundation, who came from Chicago to Middlesex to offer assistance.

Accompanying Davis from Raleigh were Mrs. Annette S. Boutwell, Rural Health Consultant for the Medical Association of North Carolina; Jack C. Knowles, Executive Secretary of the North Carolina Academy of General Practice; John Hunter, manager of the Sears store in Raleigh; Chester Davis, brother of Norman H. Davis and feature writer for the Winston-Salem Sentinel Journal.

Over a two-year period the Middlesex Rotary Club has put in many hours writing letters, telephoning, and visiting doctors whose names were furnished them
