Lodge Grand Master Tells Gathering Masonry Certainly Awake In The State

James V. Brewer, District Deputy Grand Master, told Masons in Masonic District 22 that "Masonry is certainly awake in the 22nd District."

Brewer spoke last Wednesday night at a gathering of Masons from the district at Zebulon Masonic Lodge 609, A.F.&A.M. An estimated 200 Masons from lodges in the district attended the afternoon and evening sessions. "The greatest group of Masons in the United States is right here in North Carolina," Brewer said. Brewer urged Masons to continue their support of public education. He said education is a "vital force for the country."

He also urged Masons to continue to support the church, another vital force to the community, state and nation.

"Well-planned meetings are important," he said. "Open and close your meetings on time."

Members who have been faithful and contributing in service should be recognized, he said. He urged Masonic organizations to honor such members on a special night.

He asked Masons to take an inventory of their Masonic life and to follow Masonic precepts.

"Do not be indifferent in times like these. We are living in a dangerous time," Brewer said. "Masonry stands for all that which is good. What you do is what Masonry is."

Brewer was introduced by John Vaiden Clifton, District Deputy, who called Brewer "one of the most dynamic, most energetic persons in the annals of Masonic history."

Eli Regan, assistant superintendent of Oxford Orphanage, told of the workings of the home supported by the Masons for parentless children.

He said Oxford Orphanage, which has been in operation for 33 years, is one of the few institutions which still maintains a school on its grounds. Students from the first through the sixth grades attend school six hours a day. They have supervised study after the supper hour.

Students from the seventh grade through high school are divided in the two groups. In the working vocations there are electricity, printing, shoe repair, exterior and interior painting, dairying, poultry, and farming experiences.

The high school curriculum has been enriched to meet the rigorous

BOND ISSUE

On November 7 the citizens of North Carolina will have a chance to vote their confidence in the future. Because of its historic pride of accomplishment and faith in its people the Tar Heel State has stood in the forefront of progress among the states of the nation. But a state—even a progressive state—that fails to plan ahead soon finds itself behind.

Therefore, the General Assembly has authorized a bond issue, subject to the vote of the people, to provide essential capital improvements. The objects provided for reflect careful planning for future needs, and every one of them is important to the economic and cultural development of the State and the welfare of tomorrow's citizens.

What is the money to be used for? Capital area buildings, state training schools, state educational institutions, community colleges, archives and history and state library buildings, State Ports Authority, state mental institutions, local hospital construction, Natural Resources Conservation and Development and State Agricultural Research Stations.

Negro Murdered Saturday Night; Search Still Continues For Culprit

The search for the slayer of a Route 4, Zebulon, Negro was still being continued Wednesday night.

Owen Thomas High, about 30, died Saturday night from a 12-gauge single barrel sawed-off shotgun blast, Police Chief Willie B. Hopkins said. Hopkins said High's assailant was Massey Ray Boose, a Route 3, Zebulon Negro.

High died in Wake Memorial Hospital about two hours after the shooting occurred.

Chief Hopkins said the shooting occurred between 9:30 and 10 o'clock on the paved parking lot of Parrish Marget and Grocery.

Night Policeman Wendell Perry, one of the investigating officers, said the blast entered High's stomach just below his navel.

The gun used by Boose was found by officers Monday in weeds and bushes behind the grocery-market where it was thrown after the incident.

Information garnered by officers of the shooting was that Boose, his wife, and his wife's sister got into an argument in a piccolo joint operated by Charlie Horton on Barbee Avenue. A fight ensued among the three and Boose went to his car to get his gun. High, who was an on-looker, followed Boose and tried to reason with him. Boose then turned on High.

Hopkins said there were about six witnesses to the crime.

This is the second murder which has occurred on the Parrish property. About two years ago, Hopkins said, Needham Holder was killed by his wife on these premises.

Sheriff's Deputy S. J. Blackley also investigated the Saturday night crime.

Airplane, Governor's Cadillac Meet; No. 1 Ends Up With Busted Front

When two Zebulon National Guardsmen returned to Raleigh-Durham Airport from an administrative flight to Ft. Rucker, Ala., last Sunday, they didn't know that Governor Terry Sanford was inbound from a Washington trip.

Nor did they know that the State's No. 1 Cadillac was parked, unlighted and unoccupied, on Raleigh-Durham Airport's ramp which the plane had to cross to reach the aircraft parking area.

Civilian linemen at the airport didn't know it either, and observing the arrival of the Raleigh-based Guard aircraft, waved it across the shadowed ramp toward its tie-down spot.

The Zebulon Guardsmen—Maj.

Barrie Davis and Lt. Col. Ferd Davis—moved the airplane slowly across the dark ramp, and turned it slightly to enter the Guard's tie-down area.

Then—without benefit of formal introduction—the six-place airplane met the eight-place limousine.

The result: the airplane suffered little at all; the Cadillac lost its windshield; the Guardsmen were considerably perturbed; and the Highway Patrolman who was the Governor's chauffeur grabbed a telephone to call in substitute transportation.

It was, the Governor said, "one of those things."
