

CP&L Will Repeat Atom Youth Prize

A public school award designed to encourage budding scientists and their teachers will be repeated by Carolina Power & Light Company in 1963.

The award, made for the fifth consecutive year, will be an expense-paid trip for two science students and their teachers to the National Youth Conference on the Atom to be held in Chicago next fall.

The conference is sponsored by CP&L and 60 other investor-owned companies to demonstrate peaceful uses of the atom. More than 600 students and teachers from throughout the country attended last year.

F. T. Scarborough, manager for CP&L, said competition for the atomic award is open to all high school junior and sophomores whose families are served by CP&L. Selections are made by the company from among participants in the physical science division of the district science fairs held each spring in the two Carolinas.

The science fairs are sponsored by the North and South Carolina Academies of Science in cooperation with the public school systems and are supported by CP&L and other corporations and groups in the two states.

Information on the science fairs is available through local science teachers or through the science academy offices: Dr. Forrest Lancaster, N. C. State College, Raleigh, N. C.; and Dr. James Loftin, Wofford College, Spartanburg, S. C.

Additional information on the Youth Conference itself is available through the local CP&L office, the CP&L manager said.

He added that "our company is particularly interested in atomic energy research, since we are one of four companies constructing the Southeast's first atomic power plant (at Parr, S. C.) scheduled to go into operation this year."

CP&L delegates last year were Kent Whitfield and his teacher, Mrs. Nell Hamlet, of Roxboro, (N. C.) High School, and John Dozier and his teacher, Miss Edith Tobin, of McClenaghan High School, at Florence, S. C.

The three-day program featured some of the nation's leading scientists in discussions and demonstrations on a wide range of atomic energy subjects, from radio isotopes in medicine to nuclear engines in space craft. The conference also featured symposiums and science tours for students and teachers. Young Dozier was interviewed by Voice of America and his remarks were broadcast to Iron Curtain countries.

Miss Tobin described the conference trip as "... the most inspirational award offered to any young science-minded student." Mrs. Hamlet said it is a "... tremendous encouragement (to students) in their scientific endeavor."
