Four Johnston County Youths Charged with Fertilizer Theft

Warrants were sworn out Tuesday for four Route 1, Zebulon teenagers. They were Marshall Boykin, Larry Brown, Phil Creech and William Driver, Jr. North O'Neals Constable Waylon Hinton said the youths admitted taking 12 bags of fertilizer Wednesday night, April 17, from a farm belonging to Mrs. Ella Price, also of Route 1, Zebulon.

The grandson of Mrs. Price, Larry Price of Route 1, Wendell, tends his grandmother's farm. He reported the loss of his fertilizer to Constable Hinton.

The four youths hauled the fertilizer away on a 1949 Chevrolet two-ton truck belonging to Price. They later unloaded their contraband about one and a half miles on a rural dirt road from the scene of the theft.

Constable Hinton said the boys gave no reason for stealing the fertilizer. They got no money for it. Hinton said Creech told him that Boykin told him (Creech) "he had a place for it."

Brown and Driver told the constable they helped unload the fertilizer on the rural loop road and then left the scene and did not know what became of it.

Constable Hinton said he later learned from Creech and Boykin that the two removed the fertilizer to property belonging to Jesse Bailey of Route 1, Zebulon.

Hinton valued the fertilizer between $50-$56 a ton. They were 200-pound bags.

The boys will be given a hearing in Kenly Recorder's Court Thursday (today), April 25.

Middlesex Ag Teacher Plans Retirement after 43 Years

Middlesex School is losing one of its most beloved teachers, and the community is losing one of its most respected citizens at the close of the 1963 school year.

Fred Wolfe, who has spent 28 of his 43 years teaching vocational agriculture in the Middlesex School system, is retiring. "There hasn't been a year here I've regretted," soft spoken Wolfe said. "In fact, I've enjoyed all my years in the classroom."

However, the genial ag teacher indicated he will certainly miss the contact with the boys.

"I have a farm—the old homestead in South Carolina—my wife and I are going back to," Wolfe said. "There I plan to do a lot of gardening, raise some livestock, and spend a leisurely time of it."

Wolfe, 64-years-old, is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Fred A. Wolfe. He was born on a farm about a mile from North, South Carolina. He is the middle child of three children born to the couple. He has an older brother, John, who teaches in Charlotte, and a sister, Miss Mildred Wolfe, who is a member of the Middlesex elementary faculty.

"I reckon I was influenced more by my brother John into going into the field of teaching than any other reason," Wolfe said. "And I felt sure I would like to work with young people, especially boys."

Wolfe received a bachelor of science degree in agriculture in 1920 from Clemson College. He didn't work his way through college, but received a competitive scholarship which paid most of his expenses.

His first seven years of teaching were spent in his home state. Then he came to Gold Sand School in Franklin County where he was head of the agriculture department there for eight years.

Wolfe's third and last school he will serve is Middlesex. He followed his brother John to Middlesex. His brother got the vocational system set up there.

"At that time Middlesex and Bailey were served by one agriculture instructor," Wolfe said. "The mornings were devoted to one and the afternoons to the other."

The school has had only three agriculture instructors. The first instructor acted more or less as an informational guide. The system then did not have a vocational rating.

Under Wolfe's leadership and guidance, the Middlesex agriculture department is one of the best in Nash County. The department has all the needs to meet the student's demand.

"I would say we have approximately $6,000 worth of equipment in our department," he said.

Even with his demanding duties of teaching, Wolfe has found time for civic and religious activities. He is a member of the Meth-
