Highway Improvement

Since 1956, Mr. Jackson said, more than $11,000,000 has been spent on Highway 64 east of Raleigh. The present projects will increase the total to more than $26,000,000.

The speaker paid special compliments to Cliff Benson of Raleigh, who is highway commissioner for this area. He cited Mr. Benson as "an outstanding man," and said the area is fortunate to have him as its representative.

Relating some history of the state highway system, Mr. Jackson said North Carolina was the first state to put all its roads under state control. The system includes 71,000 miles of roads, all financed by the highway fund. No money has been borrowed for the highway system in 10 years, he said, and no increase in the basic gasoline tax has been made in 30 years.

Included in North Carolina highways are 12,800 miles in the primary system. Improvements in the primary system are supported by 50% Federal money, but all maintenance must be done at state expense.

The secondary system—farm to market, school bus, and similar rural roads—adds 59,000 miles to the state system. Half of the secondary system is paved.

The new interstate system, which is built with 90% federal funds, includes 770 miles in North Carolina. This system is about 45% completed. Though Federal money aids in construction of the interstate system, the state must finance all maintenance.

By eliminating diversions of funds from highways to other projects, the state has been able to increase the amount spent for secondary road projects.

During a brief question and answer period following his talk, Mr. Jackson answered questions pertaining to the quality of "Scott" roads (they're good); time scheduled for hearings on the Zebulon by-pass (next Spring, possibly); and the date contracts will be let for the Zebulon by-pass (a pure guess set it at least a year in the future).

Rotary Club President Sidney Eddins complimented the speaker on bringing the informative program, and commended Program Chairman Davis on the series of programs on municipal, county, and state government and the services provided by each.
