

LEADING CANDIDATES ARE STANDING PAT

Convention Is Deadlocked; Balloting Is Renewed With Leaders Standing By Guns

Cox and McAdoo People Both Declare the Other Never Can Be Nominated.

DECLARATION READ

Both Forces Claim Around Five Hundred Delegates on Early Roll Calls.

(By Associated Press) AUDITORIUM, SAN FRANCISCO, July 5.—At 10:10 o'clock Chairman Robinson called the democratic national convention to order for its ninth session.

The convention was opened with a prayer and then was led in the recitation of the Lord's prayer by a Christian Science practitioner. The singing of The Star Spangled Banner followed.

By unanimous consent the declaration of independence was read to the convention. Former Governor Rawlston, of Indiana, read it. While the reading was going on the leaders took the opportunity to do some more conferring.

According to some of the various managers there was as much of a deadlock on hand as ever. The Cox people declared "McAdoo cannot be nominated if we sit here three weeks."

Many of the delegates' seats were filled today with alternates, and there were new sets of faces in many of the caucuses and conferences. The McAdoo people turned considerable attention to the Maryland delegation, of which Joshua W. Morris, of Baltimore, internal revenue collector, was the leader.

There were many empty seats in the New York delegation and it was said both delegates and alternates had departed. The same situation prevailed in the delegations of some other eastern states. The delegation chairman said they were prepared to cast a full vote by proxy.

Governor Rawlston reminded many of President Cleveland as he stood reading the Declaration of Independence, but he was all but drowned out by the buzz and rumble of conversation around the hall.

Nobody seemed interested in the reading of the declaration of independence, not even the official stenographer.

McAdoo Advocates Will Emulate Jackson In Standing For Him Like a Stone Wall

SAN FRANCISCO, July 5.—At a mass meeting of the McAdoo forces last night, Doctor Burriss W. Jenkins, of Kansas City, who placed Mr. McAdoo's name before the democratic convention, said the only criticism of his candidate was that he is the son-in-law of President Wilson.

The cry of most of the speakers was "hold the line." Several hundred persons were gathered in the main dining room at the Palace hotel, where the meetings were held.

We expect to stand like a stone wall while other candidates are polling their highest possible votes, and then, when the time comes, unanimously nominate McAdoo," said Cone Johnson, of Texas, in opening the meeting.

"We shall see to it," he added, "that no powerful interests or particular group of states control the democratic party. If we sit here and let men dominate the nomination for purposes which affect their states alone we will throw away the glorious opportunity which we have to carry the country."

"If we take a candidate before the country whom we have to introduce we shall be in no better shape than the republicans. Nominate any other candidate before the convention save McAdoo and we shall have to take his photograph around the country and explain who he is."

FOURTH OF JULY CELEBRATION AT SUMMER SCHOOL

(By Associated Press) CHAPEL HILL, July 5.—The summer school of the University of North Carolina laid aside its work today and staged what Professor "Billy" Noble said was the biggest Fourth of July celebration ever held by school people in North Carolina.

Led by Uncle Sam, with Columbia on his right hand and Carolina on his left—C. L. Sawyer, of Gastonia, in real life, and Misses Mary Lily Johnson, of Garland, and Fannie Sue Donald, of Greensboro, all of them consumed up to a million—a long parade composed of representatives of the thirty-five schools and colleges who make up the 1200 student body marched across the campus to Memorial Hall.

There may have been longer processions on the Carolina campus, but surely none more gaily costumed. Each college group was arrayed in its distinctive get-up, under its own banners, flags, and pennants.

The Rev. Dr. Moss, speaking of the utilization of freedom, told his hearers that as school teachers of North Carolina they exercised a mighty influence in helping the rising generation to understand and appreciate American freedom and he thought there wasn't any more dangerous weapon for those who didn't know how to use it or a more glorious one for those who did.

There was a balloon dance by a chorus of girls, chiefly from North Carolina College and Meredith, and D. R. Hodgin read "Your Flag and My Flag." With the audience standing and a solemn hush over the huge assemblage, Professor Noble called for the salute to the flag, and with hands raised at the salute the audience repeated slowly, "I pledge my allegiance to my flag and to the republic for which it stands—one nation, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all."

"Most Dangerous Submarine Attack" On Our Export Rate Re-Adjustments

(By Parker R. Anderson) WASHINGTON, July 5.—Governor Thomas W. Bickett, of North Carolina, was today asked by Matthew Hale, president of the South Atlantic Maritime Corporation, to call a conference at once of the governors and senators of Georgia, Florida, and South Carolina, and the presidents of the Southern, Seaboard and Atlantic Coast Line railroads to repel "a most dangerous submarine attack," which he charges is being made on the export trade re-adjustments that place South Atlantic ports on a parity with New York and North Atlantic ports.

DELEGATES RESTLESS— DEMAND QUICKER ACTION

No Over-Sunday Compromise For Breaking Deadlock Has Been Developed

(By Associated Press) SAN FRANCISCO, July 5.—The identity of the democratic presidential nominee was as much a mystery as ever to the delegates to the national convention when they reconvened today and entered upon the twenty-third ballot.

Conjecture that the over Sunday recess might possibly have brought about some compromise plan for breaking the deadlock was not supported by an announcement on the part of party leaders or admission by campaign managers.

Delegates are restless on account of the convention's delay and are anxious to return to their homes, the various campaign managers have devoted nearly as much time since Saturday night's adjournment to strengthening their own line, they have to missionary work outside the fold.

Delegates are restless. Old time convention observers assert that at this stage of the proceedings, when the delegates are anxious to get back home, any nomination that is likely to be followed in increasing proportions on subsequent ballots. The Cox, McAdoo and Palmer managers are hoping that their particular candidate may be the beneficiary of such an eventuality.

Delegates are restless. In the event that all lines remain about even, the delegates will forward some compromise candidate of the dark horse variety upon whom the various factions are united. Thus far negotiations along this line have not been encouraging.
