Still Fighting Former New Bern Players

SPORTS

Newspapers Continue War Against The Bears

The following news story, referring to New Bern baseball players who are attending the University of North Carolina this fall, appeared in this morning's News & Observer and will be of interest to local fans:

The University of North Carolina is the only institution in the state that prohibits "summer baseball" on the part of its athletes.

That fact has been the source of both pride and embarrassment to officials and friends of the University. The embarrassment has grown out of the failure of Carolina alumni and other supporters to understand why University students should be barred from participation in intercollegiate athletics for doing precisely the same thing that admittedly done by students elsewhere.

The fact that seven members of last year's baseball team played with the New Bern club of the Eastern Carolina League during the past summer has caused a storm of controversy that is still raging.

As a result of this agitation, Roy and Fred Morris and Allan McShee, the three members of the football squad involved were debarred from participating in the opening game of the season with Wake Forest last Saturday. However, the case was reopened at the request of the men involved and a number of alumni from New Bern and the announcement of the final decision has not been made.

Dr. Charles S. Morgan chairman of the athletic committee has stood squarely for strict enforcement of the rule that prohibits members of athletic teams from receiving any compensation direct or indirect for their services and has been supported in his position by other members of the committee, alumni and students.

On the other hand, the men themselves have made the claim that the salaries they received while in New Bern were paid for work in other employments and that they played baseball through the "courtesy" of their employers.

Several newspapers have pointed out that the teams in the Eastern Carolina League played baseball every day of the week and that membership of the teams was about evenly divided between college players and acknowledged professionals, who were recruited from organized leagues. One member of the New Bern team was for a while drawing one of the largest salaries paid by the Wilson club of the Virginia League at a time that club was far in excess of the league salary limit.

In view of these facts, the claim that the University players were doing for nothing that for which their fellows were paid an average of about $200 a month has seemed ridiculous to a great many people. The University men have received widespread backing and newspapers that have commented on the situation have been accused of "discrimination" against the University.

All of the colleges have made efforts to purify athletics and disbar "ringers," but there has been a wide difference of opinion as to just where the lines should be drawn. All of the colleges require a certain amount of scholastic attainments among athletes and there is general recognition of the "four year rule." The University and State College also have the "one year rule" prohibiting freshmen from playing on athletic teams, but freshmen are eligible at all of the smaller colleges.

All of the colleges also prohibit students from receiving remuneration for playing up college teams but the University has been the only one to prohibit their receiving pay for playing for so-called "semi-professional" teams in the summer.

At State College and the denominational colleges, the line is drawn at membership on a team in a league belonging to the National Association of Professional baseball leagues, but that is where the ban stops.

A Twice-Told Tale

One of interest to our readers. Good news bears repeating, and when it is confirmed after a long lapse of time, even if we hesitate to believe it at first hearing, we feel secure in accepting its truth now. The following experience of a New Bern man is confirmed after three years.

F. S. Ernul, retired farmer, 44 George St., says: "My back and kidneys gave me a lot of trouble. I had a dull pain in my back and across my loins that annoyed me. I had headaches and other signs of kidney trouble so I bought a box of Doan's Kidney Pills and they relieved me of all signs of kidney complaint."

Again, Frances Doan's

Over three years later, Mr. Ernul said: "My kidneys have been in good shape since Doan's Kidney Pills cured me. I am always ready to say a good word for this remedy and what I said in my former statement still holds good."

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Ernul had. Foster-Milburn Co., Mfrs., Buffalo, N. Y.—Ad.

Sizes Up The Giants As A Game Ball Club

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—Ability to knock-off its leading contender, was the determining factor in the winning of the National League pennant by the New York Giants.

Pittsburg was easy picking for the Giants throughout the year. McGraw's ten won 16 out of the 22 clashes. That wide margin of difference between the two clubs decided the issue.

That would make it seem that New York was much the superior club. There seems to be considerable difference of opinion on that point. The fact remains that the Giants could beat the Pirates almost as they pleased. With scarcely a month to play, Pittsburg enjoyed a seven and one-half game lead. Then followed a five game series between New York and Pittsburg, the former winning five straight. That was the b'ow that killed the Pirates.

The New York Giants are not a great ball club. There are no great teams in either the American or National league. However, the Giants are a game, hustling aggregation, led by two of the most aggressive managers in the game, John McGraw and Hughie Jennings. Such a combination of playing strength and leadership makes the Giants size up as pretty formidable aggregation to bear in a world series, which calls for gameness and aggressiveness more than anything else.

Good pitching is most essential for a pennant-winning team. During the greater part of the 1921 campaign the Giants did not get good pitching. Don't get the impression from that statement that the Giants are lacking in capable pitchers. It just seemed that at no one time was McGraw able to have four pitchers working smoothly about.

During the greater part of the season, the last month of play expected, McGraw usually had only two pitchers on whom he could depend. The dependable pitchers were not always the same fellows. For perhaps a month two certain pitchers would carry the burden, and then, as two others would round into form, the two dependable would develop a mediocre streak.

It takes a game ball club to keep plugging along with a pitching staff lacking in consistency. At one stage of the race it seemed the Giants were hopelessly out of it. It seemed impossible for McGraw's club to combine hitting with pitching. Then there came a break, the pitchers rounded into form. Good pitching was aided by timely hitting and brilliant fielding, and the Giants were on their way.

Some idea of the clip at which the New York team traveled during the last six weeks of the campaign can be gleaned by consulting the "figures."

With less than 50 games to play, McGraw's team sliced away the Pittsburg margin of seven and one-half games and was able to win with a couple to spare. The Giants in a short space of time accomplished a seemingly impossible task.

In that stretch of games, New York beat Pittsburg in eight out of nine clashes. Ability to knock off the leading contender decided the issue in favor of the Giants.

ROCKY MOUNT WINS SERIES

Defeated Wilson Team in the Final Game Yesterday of the Unofficial Series

ROCKY MOUNT, Oct. 4.—In spite of his name, Pitcher Woodhead, won the final game of the Virginia League "unofficial championship series" for Rocky Mount in yesterday's game against Wilson. The score was 10 to 0. The Bugs were clearly outclassed in the final exhibition and never had a chance to put a man across the plate. NEW SHIPMENT STUDEBAKERS

Service Motor Company Receives Another Shipment of Light Six Cars

Another carload of Studebaker Light Sixes has just been received by the Service Motor Company.

J. H. Parker, manager of this company, stated today that he believed there would be more automobiles sold this fall than during the best of the year combined. In a full page advertisement in today's paper he sets forth some interesting statistics concerning the record established by the Studebaker in sales and in service. He believes that the sale of these cars will be unusually good this fall and does not expect that the present shipment of Light Sixes will remain on his hands for any length of time.

To forget a wrong is the best revenge.

WILL GET BALL RETURNS HERE

Sun-Journal Will Endeavor To Carry Complete Detailed Reports of Games

The Sun-Journal will endeavor to get complete returns of the world series games in the paper the same day that they are played. Arrangements have been made with the Associated Press to provide the returns in detail and the paper will be out on the streets within half an hour after the conclusion of the games.

It was at first thought that the game could be secured play by play and that the returns could be announced in that manner. However, this doesn't appear to be sufficient interest among the fans to warrant that expense. If they wish the returns play by play, the Sun-Journal will endeavor to make the proper arrangements.
