Farmers' Institute Meeting.

(Concluded from page three.)

Mr. McLendon is a very impressive speaker and has attained decided success in his chosen profession, and all during his discourse offered many fine and practical suggestions whereby the farmers could annually add to their income and at the same time not be so thoroughly under the dictation of trusts and corporations and at the mercy of almost all other professions.

At the afternoon session of the Institute Mr. Parker discussed the question of corn culture, laying much stress upon the importance of preparation of soil. This question, he declared, was one of the most vital to the farmers, and the man who could cause two ears of corn to grow where but one grew before, was indeed a benefactor. He was glad to know that the average yield per acre in Nash was a little in excess of the average yield in most counties and, while this is true, if every farmer in Nash could but increase the corn yield only two bushels to the acre, it meant the adding of $100,000,000 to the wealth of the county. Mr. Parker maintained that the same preparation of soil for cotton also applied to corn, and he advocated continued cultivation of the soil until a depth of twelve inches had been attained. To grow more to the acre it was necessary to build up the soil by injecting more humus, or vegetable matter and manuring for the increase desired. Mr. Parker believed that more than $100,000,000 could be added to the wealth of Nash county by the proper seed selection alone. The selection of improved varieties of seed would naturally cause the farmers to give the crop a degree more attention, which was conducive of greater yield.

Especially interesting was the discussion of Dr. Tat Butler, who gave many practical observations on "the feeding of work stock to prevent disease." Graphically he portrayed the ignorance of many farmers of the real composition of team of every description. He declared that the question of stock raising in North Carolina had not progressed as it should and that it was just as important and necessary for farmers to study the composition of horses and mules as it was for them to study the composition of fertilizer. Another important matter was the systematic feeding of stock; the adoption of regular hours and guarding against over-feeding. Dr. Butler maintained that if twelve pounds of grain were to be given to a team each day it was better that one-half of this amount be given at the evening meal and the other half be divided into two parts and given in the morning and at noon. Heavy feeding while work is being done usually causes the team to be sluggish and frequently causes colic and other diseases common to stock. It is a mistaken idea that, because a team has to do excessive work for a day, to increase the feed, which usually results in colic or unfitting the animal for the task. The collar-pad Dr. Butler declared to be an abomination, and he dwelt at length on the importance of selecting only the very best hard leather collars, care being taken that the same fit nicely. Bathing the teams' shoulders after working with cold water would prevent sores or collar galls. Present prices of team should be taken into consideration and the farmers were urged to give more attention to the proper care of same. Throughout the discourse Dr. Butler was most interesting and gave many fine and practical suggestions regarding the treatment and care of work team and cattle.

The session came to a close after a very impressive talk by Dr. McLendon on "the social side of farm life" and he urged greater care and more modern improvements around the home; the installation of water works, bath rooms and a liberal application of paint to the premises. Labor conditions were increasing the duties of the wives and daughters and every modern appliance for diminishing their labor in the home should be secured instead of continually trying to purchase more land. Make the home life attractive and offer inducements for the boys to remain on the farm. The farmers should be groused to greater effort along this line, especially for the comfort of the women, for upon them depend the future hope and prosperity of North Carolina.
