TRIPLE FUNERAL SERVICE.

Held at Same Hour and in the Same Church.

An unusual and impressive sight was witnessed at Galatia A. M. E. Church in "Brooklyn," a colored settlement just in the southern outskirts of Nashville, last Sunday afternoon, when Rev. A. L. Sanders, col., conducted a triple burial service; there being three corpses in the church at one time followed by three families of mourners, while the building was crowded to overflowing with a large crowd of colored people who were seriously affected by the solemnity and seeming awfulness of the occasion.

In one funeral party was the family of P. A. Richardson, a well-known and respected citizen of Nashville, whose little girl, after a lingering illness, died on Friday night. In another party were gathered the relatives of Bettie Cooper, a colored woman, who died in Rocky Mount Friday night and whose remains were brought here for burial. On the other side of the church, near the altar, were those who followed the remains of the little child of Jas. Mitchell, who died also on Friday night. The triple services were conducted by Rev. Sanders and afterwards the various mourning parties and friends went to the cemetery in "Brooklyn" where the interments were made.

The incident was one of the first of its kind to occur in the history of Nashville, possibly in the State, and one that has cast a gloom over the homes of the colored population of the town.

Hammers and Saws Ringing.

The building fever seems to have invaded the eastern end of Nashville. Mr. Geo. W. Womble has recently completed a very handsome and well-appointed cottage residence. Dr. Jas. P. Battle is continually placing building material on his lot on East Church street and soon the ring of hammer and saw will be heard in that quarter. There is continuous activity around the handsome residence of Mr. Geo. N. Bissette as that structure approaches hasty proportions. Mr. C. C. Ward has just completed the decided improvements made on his residence. Mr. W. S. Cooper now occupies a very nice new cottage residence on East Elm street. Clerk of the Court Sills is making quite a change in his comfortable and well appointed home by the addition of another large living room and otherwise extending the porch fronting on Washington Street. At an early date Mr. G. C. Beryman will begin remodeling his bungalow on First street, near the residence of Mr. L. T. Vaughan, that is now occupied by Mr. L. W. Strickland.

Wine Fight for Life.

It was a long and bloody fight for life that was waged by James B. Meribon, of Newark, N. J., of which he writes: "I had lost much blood from lung hemorrhages, and was very weak and run down. For eight months I was unable to work. Death seemed close on my heels. When I began, three weeks ago, to take Dr. King's New Discovery. But it has helped me greatly. It is doing all that you claim." For weak, sore lungs, obstinate coughs, stubborn colds, hoarseness, influenza, grippe, asthma, hay-fever or any throat or lung trouble the supreme. 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free. Guaranteed by Nashville Drug Co.

J. M. Howell, a popular druggist of Greensburg, Pa., says: "We use Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in our dispensary and have it in our homes. It is a great relief to all who use it." For sale by all druggists.

STEAM HEATING THE VINE.

Reasons which led to the discovery that it increases the fertility.

When the vineyards of Europe were overtake by the phylloxera, a minute insect which lives upon the roots of the vine and eventually destroys it, it at first appeared as though no means could be found to combat the pestilence. Gradually various remedies have been discovered, of which the most widely applied has been the employment of American species of vine as the underground stocks, upon which the old varieties accustomed for making wine were then grafted.

The American vine is strong enough to resist the attack of the parasite; it even confers a new vigor and yielding power upon the more delicate vintage grape that it carries, so that by its help many of the old European vineyards have not only been regenerated but also made to produce more wine of the acre than before the advent of the phylloxera.

But the more famous vineyards, where are grown the grands crus that bear a name all the world over, have hesitated to use the American stock, fearing such a deterioration in the quality of the grape as would never be compensated for by any increase of quantity. The remedy against phylloxera on which they have chiefly relied has been the injection into the soil of small quantities of carbon disulphide, a volatile liquid giving rise to a heavy poisonous vapor. It was found that this vapor diffused through the soil and killed the phylloxera, while the root of the vine took no harm. In this way the phylloxera can be kept in check, if not actually stamped out, but the expense of the process limits its adoption except in the most valuable vineyards.

The point of this story, says Harper's Magazine, is that a certain Alsatian vine grower before 1894 made the observation that land which had thus been treated with carbon disulphide became more productive than it was before, even when the destruction of the phylloxera was left entirely out of the question. But this observation remained unappreciated, just like the similar records of the gain in fertility brought about by heating the soil to the temperature of boiling water.

However, confirmatory evidence gradually accrued, until such scientific men as concern themselves with the soil have within the last few years become convinced that there was a real and novel set of phenomena to be explained. Some of the United States station workers even began to advocate the steam heating of soil destined for the growth of plants in greenhouses; they maintained that not only was freedom from certain fungoid diseases and animal pests thus secured but that the productiveness of the soil was sufficiently raised to pay for the treatment.

Unexplored Caves of California.

In the vicinity of Tuolumne Lake, California, about forty extinct volcanoes have been found, many already being covered with thick vegetation, and beneath the beds of lava given off by them in the past numerous interesting caverns have recently been discovered and explored. One is said to be 200 feet long, 50 feet wide and 10 feet high. Another has been reported discovered which is miles long; it has been named the Mammoth Cave of California.

One recently explored is said to contain two stories, the temperature in the under one being so low that icicles two yards long depended from the ceiling. Large caves have various origins. Many have once been solid ground, covered with heavy clay and limestone rock; the lower ground is washed away by underground waters, a roof and floor being left. Other caves are the result of air or other gases getting into the molten lava, expanding with the heat and blowing themselves into lava bubbles, leaving hollows and caverns when the lava has cooled and hardened, just as air bubbles may be seen to do in molten tar.—Pathfinder.

The Love Apple.

The tomato, wholesome, toothsome, capable for such variety of edible use as it is, was not found out by man until comparatively recent times. It is a native of western South America, whence it was introduced and cultivated in Europe during the sixteenth century. At first its wrinkled fruits were regarded with suspicion and it was grown to be looked at as a curiosity more than anything else. Cultivation smoothed out the wrinkles and developed the tomato as that in the eighteenth century both yellow and red varieties were known. There are old people, now living to-day, who relate that in their childhood the tomato was known as the "love apple" and was poisonous if eaten too much of.

How Kean is Your Taste?

From a series of experience recently made at the University of Kansas it is evident that the average person can taste the bitter of quinine when one part is dissolved in 153,000 parts of water. Salt was detected in water when one part of 640 of the liquid was used. Sugar could be tasted in 223 parts of water and common soda in 41. In nearly all cases women could detect a smaller quantity than men.—New York World.
