The Good Roads Association.

The North Carolina Good Roads ssociation is doing a great work. It is no longer a voice crying in the wilderness, because it has offsprings in thirty-five counties of the state. These offsprings take the form of young good roads associations, and what these thirty-five lusty youngsters, in co-operation with the virile parent organization, is accomplishing, is something to be wondered at.

In the words of Dr. Pratt, "the association has been very active in trying to mould public opinion in favor of progressive road legisla-tion, and while no laws of state-wide importance were enacted, a great many local bills for counties and townships were passed, which will undoubtedly enable the counties which take advantage of increased revenue from a special tax or bond issue to greatly increase their mileage of good roads."

The state association is working out through the county associations into the very midst of rural communities. Thus, not only is it awakening a good roads sentiment wherever it touches, but, through its literature and speakers, it is harmonizing, systematizing and directing that sentiment so that the greatest good can be accomplished from the expert counsel and advice furnished. The association is urging needed highway legislation, and the temper legislature will hear and heed the of the time indicates that the next

To accomplish the best results the state and county associations must whole-heartedly "pull together." All county associations should be well represented at the annual meeting of the state association in Winston-Salem on June 13 and 14. The place of meeting is not a great way off, and we can well afford to use a few days in joining in a big conference on a subject of such vital significance. Let the Lenoir county delegates prepare beforehand to attend the meeting!—Kinston Free Press.

Crime is Crime.

President Taft in his able discussion of the Morse and Walsh cases, declared that the national banking with and earning capacity of or $020. laws must be enforced regardless of the prominence or obscurity of individuals implicated in violations. This is well and good. The man who frivols with our banking laws is an enemy, and a dangerous one, to society.

But what of the trust magnate who frivols with the laws relating to 'restraint of trade?" Is he to be given immunity on the score that his sins are neither "unreasonable" or "undue ?"

What is the difference between the crime of violating the banking law and the crime of violating the antitrust laws?

Is not a violation in either case criminal offense, calling for equal nishment.?

If the government will carry out the excellent counsel of the president a greal many men "higher up" will be placed where Walsh and Morse are.-Charlotte News.

Clark Making Mistake.

The Stanley Enterprise thinks that "Judge Clark will not be elected senator. Not because there are stronger or more learned men in the where he is needed most, and the people will keep him there. His reputation is becoming national in nature. As senator, he would soon fade into insignificance." To a man up-the-tree this seems to be about the situation. It's a pity for Judge Clark to resign the high office he fills so much to the credit both of himself and of the state. And then, it would be a pity to have him run for another office while heading the preme court.-Free Press.

WARRENTON'S OPPORTUNITY.

That Town Wants The Castalia Railroad Terminus.

The citizens of Castalia, Nash county, have issued bonds in amount of fifteen thousand dollars and have raised the same amount by subscription by stock to build a road connecting Castalia with Nashville and there get conection with the Coast Line Railroad. It seems to us that the extension of the Warrenton Railroad to Castalia would be a move in the right direction and open up a virgin country, far removed from railroad facilities. It is a well known fact that connection with eastern North Carolina is made by a roundabout way of Raleigh or Weldon and much valuable time is lost going either way. The distance to Castalia is within thirty-five miles. This would put Nashville and Castalia in closer touch with the Northern markets over the Nashville-Norlina line and would put Warrenton easy of access to the eastern country as a summer resort, and would be the means of building up this town and adding to its prestige. It would enable manufactories to be established here, especially for building material, brick, etc. Other towns are trying to get the railroad connection, but Warrenton should make a determined effort, for it is the logical course for the road to be built. Altogether for the Norlina-Nashville Railroad.-Warrenton Record.

More Machinery.

The agricultural reform, from which the greatest net gain will be realized in the South, and at the least cost, is the use of more power and improved machinery on the farm. A careful inquiry into the causes for the farm workers in the different States varying so widely in the values produced will demonstrate that it was mainly due to the ratio of horses or mules employed to the number of workers upon the farms. In Iowa, where each farm worker produces $611.11 annually, exclusive of stock, nearly four horses per worker were used. In Vermont, used, and in South Carolina, where each farm worker produced $144.46, one mule for two laborers was the average farm power. An analysis of the Southern States show a much smaller use of power on the farm, and consequently less use of good machinery than in the Northern States, and a correspondingly lower learning capacity. Where one mule weighing 800 to 900 pounds, and one man to plow, accomplishing less than an acre per day from 3 to 4 inches deep, the Iowa farmer uses at least three horses, weighing from 1.500 pounds each and plaws four acres per day, 6 to 8 inches deep.

He uses five and one half time the power and accomplishes about eight times the work in a day, if depth of plowing be considered. What is true of plowing is equally true of other lines of farm work. There has been considerable instruction along the line of how to produce larger crops per acre, but they have not taught the importance of working more acres in a day.

This is the key to agricultural reform: More power and better machinery on the farm and more accomplished in a day, heavier mules and more of them. Away with the half a mule farmer and convert the one mule farmer into a four mule farmer. What revolutionized mannade us the first of productive nations? More power and less hand the farm and multiply the wes and work.-Progressive Farmer.

The Educated Farmer.

James J. Hill, the railroad president, has had a pretty_wide experience of men and the conditions of success in life. Having himself achieved brilliant success in life, his opinions are entitled to respect. He wonders why university men each year do not go into agricultural industry by scores and by hundreds upon their graduation. Except the object be political power or else the rapid and exceptional accumulation of wealth by speculation, he knows no calling in which the rewards are so great and so certain as in that of the educated farmer. The professions are overcrowded in many of he branches, but there is a lack of scientific husbandry in the country. Competition in business in most of its branches is now so close and exacting, that liberal rewards in this quarter are reserved for men of exceptional ability. The average man, no matter how industrious, is held down by overcrowding and prohibitive competition in business. But there is not and there never can be for long ages to come any oversupply of educated farmers in this country. Of course, university training should be supplemented by just such practical instruction as is essential in any other calling. It is possible to shape one's studies in the university to this end, and a man's success upon the farm is then virtually assured. -Louisville Courier-Journal.

The Folly of Lawsuits.

Whatever else you do, don't get into a lawsuit over some trifling disagreement with a neighbor. The courts are full of such suits which could have been settled by mutual concession or by arbitration to the advantage of all parties except the lawyers in the case. Just a few days ago a suit was decided after two or pation of the new outbreak, and that three years of expense and worry on the part of two families. It was over a disputed line, as so many such suits are, and the land in dispute was probably not worth over fifty dollars. The suit cost the winner $2.00, and the loser, being taxed with and earning capacity of of $328. with the costs, necessarily had more in monkeying with the case. Another case recently noticed is where a farmer had a right to get grams, and it was decided to give water from a spring on a neighbor's land. He wanted to build a springhouse, the owner objected. The first man had gotten along without a spring-house for years, it would not have damaged the land-owner a penny, yet an injunction has been issued and a law suit is on. Each party will probably spend several hundred dollars and be no better off, and the old friendliness of the neighborhood will be a thing of the past.

To begin a suit over some such trivial matter which could be easily adjusted by a little give and take, is not only the poorest sort of business policy-a case of wasting certain dollars to gain certain cents,-but is also a crime against the community the cigarette habit, and she has and a foolish waste of the best part thus far failed to cure him, or preof life. For what shall it profit a man if he gain a needless lawsuit only to lose the goodwill of his neighbors and his own friendliness toward them?-The Commoner.

The Route Does Not Matter.

Finally one of them called a neighufacturing in the Uniter States and bor who was passing and asked his made us the first of productive nachurch in which to be saved. "Well, work. #### Victim of the Cigarette Babit.

The editor is asked strange questions sometimes. He is willing to help enquirers if he is able, but sometimes he is forced to confess inability, as in this case. A good woman, who has been a subscriber for many years, and has had reason to confide in the judgement and friendly disposition of the editor, writes that she has discovered that her darling boy, a lad 16, has acquired vent him from getting the evil things. She is distressed and disheartened and asks what she must do. We have written her, giving the best advice that came to mine, but it was not satisfactory to us, nor will it be to her we fear.
