Social Impurity.

It is high time for those who are trying to live clean lives to set themselves in array against the strong tide of evil that is flowing through our land. It is a great deal harder to say for a young man to "cleanse himself" than it ever was before. Impurity is conjoined in young men, and they find that they can walk in filth and still find the way open wide to what is regarded as the best society. Nor is it all, nor the worst. A reformer is looked with horror upon among women who even allowed a breath of suspicion to gather about her, and conduct that was even indelicate was enough to shut the doors of pure homes in her face. Now it is different. Girls whose conduct is more than respectable are allowed all the privileges and given all the honors of those who are no less and womanly. It is not worth while for us to mince matters. The social standards have been lowered. The sense of honor of the olden time is now laughed out of court. Mothers, anxious that their daughters shall receive attention, shut their eyes to what they know is wrong and dangerous and allow their girls to do things that would not have been tolerated in the preceding generation. Our colleges, especially for boys, are said to be centers of social depravity. The faculties, forgetting that they are responsible for the moral as well as the mental welfare of the student body, refuse to interfere, though the night is filled with wild orgies, and the young men make themselves beasts of the field. The core of the trouble, however, is in the home life. That is the cradle of our safety. Parental laxity is the bane of our time. If fathers and mothers will not protect their children, who will? It requires sense, religion and grit to stand against the foolish and dangerous demands of our modern social life. But it is worth the price. We need more "Puritan" parents. The rules of the home that are regarded as hard and cruel need to be re-established and rigidly enforced. What seems grievous to a boy or girl now will in the years to come bring him the highest joy and gratitude. And our churches. What about them. Do they stand for social purity? or do they condone and tolerate the rake and the libertine? May not the names of moral lepers be found on their rolls? Are we as careful to keep our record clean in this respect as we ought to be?

Brethren, it is time that some of us were getting on our knees and asking the Lord to give us grace and courage to do our duty. No matter what other churches do. They can not set a standard for mine. Among Baptists each church is a separate and independent organization. What are we going to do about this tide of social corruption that is deepening every day? We can do much if we will. Will we rise up and demand that the temple be cleansed? Will we allow the unclean to be protected in their lustful living by the prestige of the church of God?—Charity and Children.

Kill More Than Wild Beast. The number of people killed yearly by wild beasts don't approach the vast number killed by disease germs. No life is safe from their attack. They're in air, water, dust, even food. But grand protection is afforded by Electric Bitters, which expel and destroy these deadly disease germs from the system. That's why cholera, fever and ague, malaria and many blood diseases yield to this wonderful blood purifier. Try them and enjoy the glorious health and new strength they'll give you. Money back if not satisfied. Only $1.00 at Nashville Drug Co.

THE VIEWPOINT OF FARMERS.

(Concluded from First Page)

ward Senator Simmons. Now, tell me, does Mr. Simmons' high stand and influence in the Senate have much to do with your people's stand and, as it is now developing.

Mr. Smith—Yes, it does. We are beginning to realize that what has hurt us most since the War, has been our habit of giving only short terms of service to our representatives in Congress. That's the reason we've been getting the short end of national favors—we've been in the habit of taking a man away, just as he was getting in a position to benefit us. Take Mr. Simmons, now. He's on both the big committees that Senators Vance and Ransom were on, and is on several others of the most important committees in the Senate. He is now perhaps the most influential Democratic Senator, and one of the ablest. If the next Senate is Democratic, and it seems sure, he will be Chairman of the all-powerful Finance Committee, a position that carries with it the leadership of the Senate, and almost unlimited power. He will be able to get anything for North Carolina that she wants, within reason. Our State for the first time in the history of the government will have the Senate Leader, and will sit at the head of the table. We don't believe in replacing Mr. Simmons with a new man who would have to begin at the foot, and whom it would require ten years more to get where Mr. Simmons is now, if he ever did get there, which would be doubtful.

Newspaper Man—I am very glad to hear that your people are thinking for themselves about these matters. It's a good sign.

Mr. Smith—Yes, sir, that's what we've done, thinking for ourselves, and much as we like Governor Coker, Governor Kitchen, and Judge Clark, it seems that the more we think about the matter and look into it, the more we are convinced that Senator Simmons ought to be re-elected. I haven't heard of the simple change from him to another candidate, and on the contrary, I hear every day of people coming out for Simmons from the ranks of the other candidates. It looks as if the Senator is going to have a runaway race, and he will, if all the voters will inform themselves.

Newspaper Man—Well, fortunately, the people have plenty of time to look into the matter, and from what you say, it seems that they are doing it. Good Day, Mr. Smith, come in again.

Mr. Smith—Good-bye, Mr. Newspaper Man, you can publish what I have said if you wish to, for I am anxious for all my brother farmers to think about this situation before they take sides.—Twin County Echo.

POULTRY

SCHEME FOR POULTRY HOUSE.

Best Arrangement is Tight Building Adjoining Open One.

One of the greatest expenses that any poultryer has is the buildings he requires. Most of us think it necessary to keep poultry in buildings, but unquestionably a part of these buildings may be open and inexpensive, and yet affording protection from wind, snow and rain, writes Hollister Sage in Farmer's Voice. The best arrangement is a tight building adjoining an open one, the former for night occupancy and laying, where the fowls may be shut in if the weather be extreme. This need be only one-third the size of the open shed, but must join it, so the hens need not go out in the wind and snow. The floor of this shed must be made of matched stuff so that no wind can come up through it, and should be covered six inches deep with litter. Into this the whole grain is thrown, that the fowls may have the needed exercise. The amount of cold that hens will endure and continue to lay if kept busy exceeds belief.

The roof, of course, must be tight, as no moisture must be allowed in the litter. The roof should be a long one to the north, with a short one sloping south. Under the eaves of the southern roof is nailed a sheet the entire length and wide enough to cover the open front. This is made of burlap or old bran sacks, and in a loop at the bottom rests a light pole to keep it down so the wind and snow may be excluded at night. As soon as the sun is up in the morning it is rolled up and tied to ropes under the eaves. In spring and summer these scratching sheds are not required, and are employed in raising large flocks of chickens.

It is best to begin by setting a brooder in one corner of each, in which to raise 75 or 100 incubator chicks, and this net faced house is their home, with a yard attached, until cold weather, when they are changed to flocks for layers of fattening. The scratching sheds are then in requisition again. It is not difficult to build them in sections that may be taken apart and moved readily from one part of the grounds to another. The heaviest section is the floor, but this is managed easily on two wheelbarrows.

Preserving Eggs.

A great many experiments in preserving eggs with water glass have demonstrated that when properly done it is one of the best methods in use. Water glass is silicate of sodium and it may be purchased at any good drug store at from 80 cents to $1.20 per gallon.

Prepare the solution by using water that has been boiled and cooled to ordinary temperature. To fifteen quarts of water add one quart of water glass. Put the eggs in a clean jar, one that has been well washed and thoroughly scalded, and pour liquid enough over them to cover the eggs completely. Use only perfectly fresh eggs. No method can keep an egg good that has already commenced to spoil. Do not wash the eggs before packing them. Keep the jar in a cool, dark place. Each day's gathering of eggs are better if packed immediately. Success depends on doing everything in connection with it right and at the proper time.

Practical Poultry Points.

Feed raw vegetables, cabbage, beets and turnips to the poultry in the morning, or at noon, but not at night. Dry and warm feed is better after noontime. It is a mistake to think that a hen should scratch all the time for a living. She needs time to rest, as well as other two-legged creatures, and corn should be hung to her each day. It is a mistake to keep chickens of different age together. March pullets, if properly cared for, will begin laying in November. Beside this consideration, the younger chicks are robbed by the older ones, and thus prevented from thriving as they should. If the combs of hens turn pale, change the feed and give them good ventilation. Also give them out of door exercise. Sort your eggs well before marketing. Wash dirty eggs. A few dirty eggs will spoil the looks of a whole batch. Eggs that have been shipped by express should not be set until they have rested a day.

Fresh Air for Chicks.

Raise your chicks outdoors at all seasons of the year; give them every opportunity to get fresh air and sunshine. Keep them in small flocks until they root regularly. Keep the roofs of all brooders and coops water tight. Dampness is fatal to chickens, old or young. If coops leak, cover with tar roofing or canvas painted with several coats of white lead.

Thin Turkeys.

Turkey shippers and producers who market their own birds should not forget that the markets do not want thin turkeys.

Dug Wells, Dangerous!

The dug well with its dead animals and dirt is merely a cess-pool filled with germs and death. Bad water means bad health to man and beast. 85 per cent of typhoid comes from impure water.

The Drilled Well is A Guarantee Against Typhoid and Contagion

It means an inexhaustible supply of pure, sparkling water for all purposes. A drilled well does not dry or freeze up, leaving you without water.
