Aristocratic Stealing

A few nights ago, while out on a spree George Holcomb, white, and Jim Saunders, colored, had a slight transaction over an old brass watch which has now become a pone of contention and may be the cause of the colored fellow being sent to the county roads. Holeomb borrowed a quarter from Sannders upon the watch, agreeing to redeem it Saturday or Monday by paying Saunders 35 cents. Last Saturday Holcomb made a tender of the 35 cents to Saunde a and demanded the brass time piece. Saunders it seems had pawned the watch to another fellow and put Holcomb off by telling him be had not time to get it then and for him to come back Monday. Holcomb went back Monday morning but Saunders wanted more time. Holcomb swore out a warrant before Squire Lehmán for emberzlement and the trul was not for 5 o'clock Wednesday. In speaking of the charge against him the negro termed it aristocratic stealing, so to
