The relators and the members of their families accompanying them were transported at will during their stay over the city and suburban lines of the Tidewater Power Co., which operates the line to the beach. On Friday they were the guests of that princely gentleman, Capt. Juo. W. Harper, on a trip to Southport, which was probably the most delightful single event of the meeting. Luncheon was served on the boat by the ladies of Wilmington. The trip was made down the river to Southport and return.

So many things crowd on the mind when we attempt to write of the convention that we are forced to stop for lack of space to even mention them secretary and treasurer for the twenty-third time. There is nothing be appreciates more than the good will and fraternal feeling of his brother editors, and there is no service for their enjoyment possible which he will not cheerfully render at any cost.
