JOHN M. OGLESBY, City Editor.
Concord, N. C., December 8, 1910.

The Census Bureau at Washington expects to announce at 12 o'clock, noon, next Saturday the total population of the United States for 1910, in comparison with the totals for 1900 and 1890, showing the percentage of increase for each decade, and also giving the ranking order of the States at the time the last census was taken. We have made arrangements to receive this information by wire, and expect to give it to the readers of The Tribune in Saturday afternoon's issue.

The fellows who are expecting their Christmas jugs by express will unite in the opinion that the Interstate Commerce Commission is a great institution, no matter what may have been their opinion previously of this body. On yesterday the commission decided that the proposed advance in express rates for the transportation of liquors in packages, which were to have gone into effect December 5, have been suspended until April 14, 1911.

Notwithstanding the great depression in the cotton manufacturing business, a depression which has existed for several years without a rift in the cloud, the publication is made that a new $350,000 mill is to be erected at once in Lexington. We hope the projectors are building as they know.

Ballinger Vindicated of All Charges Against Him.

Vindicating Secretary of the Interior Ballinger upon all the charges brought against him and condemning his accusers as having been inspired by a deep feeling of animosity built upon a supposed difference in policy respecting conservation, a majority of the congressional committee which investigated the so-called Ballinger-Pinchot case Wednesday submitted its report to Congress.

After stating that the evidence presented related in the main to charges of various kinds against Mr. Ballinger and that these came chiefly from two sources—L. R. Glavis and Gifford Pinchot—the majority announced the following conclusion:

"The evidence has wholly failed to make out a case. Neither any fact proved nor all the facts put together exhibit Mr. Ballinger as being anything but a competent and honorable gentleman, honestly and faithfully performing the duties of his high office with an eye single to the public interest."

Gratifying Report of Baptist Secretary Made.

The State Mission Board through the corresponding secretary, Livingston Johnston, made its annual report which shows a gain of $3,100.31 the past year and the missionaries report 2,227 baptisms. During the year 68 new church buildings were erected and 14 new churches organized. The total expenditures of the board amount to $41,428.46. The reports from the mission stations show that there were 110 more baptisms this year than last and 267 more were received by letter. The financial showing is far better than that of last year. There were 41 houses of worship building last year and 68 this year. The reports show 26 houses finished this year as against 22 last. The report of Sunday School Secretary E. L. Middleton shows a marked gain in the department of Sunday school work. The total enrollment is 165,000 which is an increase of 11,500. There are 1,790 schools, an increase of 109.

Her reason dethroned by brooding over the ravages of the boll weevil in her cotton fields during the past year, Mrs. J. R. Hudspeth, a wealthy woman planter of Yazoo county, Miss., committed suicide Tuesday by jumping out of a boat into the waters of Wolf Lake, about nine miles from Yazoo City. The woman was being rowed across the lake by a negro boy, who hastily paddled to shore after Mrs. Hudspeth had plunged overboard.

Take Care:

Remember that when your kidneys are affected, your life is in danger. M. Mayer, Rochester, N. Y., says: "My trouble started with a sharp shooting pain over my back which grew worse daily. I felt sluggish and tired, my kidney action was irregular and frequent. I started using Foley Kidney Pills. Each dose seemed to put new life and strength into me, and now I am completely cured and feel better and stronger than for years. Cabarrus Drug Company."

MONACO SEIZES ROULETTE TOLL.

Bloodless Revolt Ends Absolutism in Monte Carlo Realm.

The recent events in the world have made up a budget of news sufficient to swamp nearly all journalistic interest in a revolution which, if it took place in the smallest sovereign state in the world, was none the less serious for that. In other words, Albert, prince of Monaco, ran a very serious risk of following the example of the Portuguese sovereign and of finding his miniature principality over which he held absolute sway converted into a republic.

Those who have lived in and about the principality of Monaco, which, as some one once remarked, is so small that you never know whether you are in or out of it, have been well aware for some time past of the discontent of the natives. It was not in the immediate neighborhood of the famous casino, where the roulette wheel never tires, that this discontent was evident, but in the Ville de Monaco itself there have been growls and mutterings for many months past—growls which developed into something more threatening and induced the prince to accord his people liberty of the press and the right to elect their municipal council.

People's Appetite Whetted.

Once political blood was tasted the Monagasques wanted more. It was all very well, they cried, to live tax free in a country to which the foreigners flocked in such numbers as to give employment to all and prosperity to most. It was all very well to be able to say what one liked in the public press and to have the right to elect one's municipal governors. But that was not enough. Why should the millions that came from the coffers of the casino pass into the hands of the sovereign, to be administered by him as best he pleased without consulting his loyal subjects?

Thus the natives argued, and their leaders fanned the flame of discontent. A deputation was formed, and the people called upon the prince at his hotel in Paris to press the people's demands. The sovereign kept the deputation kicking their heels in Paris for a week, then sent them word that he would give them rendezvous in Brussels.

The infuriated deputation returned to Monaco, and the growls developed into a bark. A wire was sent to the sovereign, who began to realize that matters were getting beyond a joke. So he sent his son, the hereditary Prince Louis, to arrange matters. Prince Louis arrived in Monaco to be met by an angry population. Prince Louis was escorted in ominous silence to his palace, where the municipal council gave him forty-eight hours in which to make up his mind. So Prince Louis, after reflection, wired to his father to the effect that all the trumps were in the people's hands, and his father wired back that he gave up the game.

Thus was the revolution of Monaco carried out without bloodshed and an absolute sovereign converted into a miniature imitation of King George V.

Revolutionists Are Few.

Just as Monaco is the smallest sovereign state in all the wide world, so has the revolution been accomplished by what is surely the smallest number of natives that have ever been responsible for a coup d'etat. It will astonish a good many to learn that the entire native population of the principality of Monaco—men, women and children—consist of 1,500 souls, while the roll of voters numbers exactly 650. The foreigners of Monaco number 15,000.

Prince Albert's first parliament will likewise make up a tiny total, for its members will be just eighteen in number. In fact, one may say with all certainty that the largest thing in Monaco is its revenue, of which the newly made constitution will have the handling.

While the prince will of necessity suffer financially by the revolution, he will be by no means a poor sovereign in the future. Quite apart from the enormous fortune he has amassed, most of which is invested in Germany—he is an intimate friend of the kaiser—he will in the future be allowed a sum of about $900,000 per annum—no meager amount considering the size of his dominions! His parliament, by the way, will demand from him no account of his past stewardship.

Persia Bans Aniline Dyes.

To Stop Bogus Fire Alarms.

To provide against false fire alarms an inventor has suggested a fire alarm box that locks a handcuff on the wrist of a person who rings an alarm, removable only by a fire department officer.

Worse than an alarm of fire at night is the metallic cough of croup, bringing dread to the household. Careful mothers keep Foley's Honey and Tar in the house and give it at the first sign of danger. It contains no opiates. Cabarrus Drug Company.

Man's Greatest Asset

is physical strength and bodily health. The bread winner cannot afford to give out.

It is a vital necessity that he keep his nervous and muscular system in good condition to withstand the daily wear and tear of life.

Those who are run-down, weakened or nervous should remember that nothing excels Vinol, which is a combination of the medicinal elements of the cod's liver an dionic iron, to strengthen the digestive organs, create an appetite, make new blood and restore strength.

Prof. James Mitchell, of Jasper, Ont., says his system was run down to a critical point from overwork. A friend told him to take Vinol. He did so and is now enjoying perfect health, and he considers Vinol a wonderful tonic (We guarantee this testimonial to be genuine.)

We ask every run-down overworked weak person in this vicinity to try a bottle of Vinol with the understanding that their money will be returned if it does not do all we claim.—Gibson Drug Store.
