JOHN M. OGLESBY, City Editor.

Concord, N. C., January 17, 1911.

In speaking yesterday of the illness of Mr. Thad R. Manning, who is forced to give up editorial work after 29 years as editor of the Henderson Gold Leaf, we stated that we could think of only three who had been "connected" with the same paper for twenty-five continuous years. We intended to speak only of those who had been editors of the same paper for such a length of time. There are several newspaper men in the State who have been connected with the same paper for twenty-five years, and several who have been editors of their papers for almost as long. Mr. R. R. Clark has been with the Statesville Landmark for more than a quarter of a century, but we believe has not been its editor quite so long. Mr. Jas. A. Robinson was editor of the Durham Sun for more than 20 consecutive years. Mr. Joseph Daniels has been an editor of a daily paper in Raleigh for 25 years, but he has not been editor of the News and Observer so long. In the hurry of writing yesterday it is probable that we overlooked several who have been editors of the same journal for twenty-five years or more. They are: Mr. J. G. Boylin, of the Wadesboro Messenger Intelligencer; Mr. J. J. Farris, of the High Point Enterprise; Maj. E. J. Hale, of the Fayetteville Observer; Mr. J. D. Kernodle, of the Graham Gleaner, and Mr. F. M. Williams, of the Newton Enterprise.

The most shameful chapter in the history of American politics is now being written in Adams county, Ohio. In this little hillside section of the State—not a hundred miles from Cincinnati—1,500 of its 6,578 voters have been indicted for selling their votes at the last election! More than 1,000 have been sentenced and disfranchised for a term of five years! Before the Grand Jury ends its work at least half the voting population of the county will be under indictment. When the court finishes its sentencing there will not be enough qualified citizens in Adams county to carry on the work of government, and special provisions will have to be made to secure men to hold office and to serve on juries. Remember, please, that this is in enlightened Ohio, and not in the dark and benighted South.

A Reliable Cough Medicine is a valuable family friend. Foley's Honey and Tar fulfills this condition exactly. FARRELL'S WAGES $4.65 PER WEEK.

New Steel Head Puddled Way up to $100,000 Job.

When I was a boy I worked with a mill at puddling iron in a rolling mill. I puddled away and managed to thrive on wages per week four sixty-five. My motto was always "succeed or bust." And now I'm the head of the big steel trust!

There is to be a new president of the steel trust, after all, to succeed William Ellis Corey. J. Pierpont Morgan and Albert H. Gary had about made up their minds not to put up another shining mark as the head of the gigantic organization, but the course of events made it necessary for them to modify their plans.

No Price Cutting Likely. There have been insistent demands from heads of departments to know who was to be the operating head of the combination and what his attitude would be toward price cutting and an open market. Mr. Farrell's selection means no open market and no price cutting, as was desired by Mr. Corey. Mr. Farrell, who started in business at sixteen as a $4.65 a week laborer in a wire mill, has been president of the United States Steel Products Export company, a subsidiary of the steel combine handling the export trade. He lives in Brooklyn. He is forty-eight years of age, six feet one inch in his stocking feet and weighs 220 pounds. He has prematurely white hair, parted in the middle, and a drooping white mustache. His presence is that of a military man, and his clear blue gray eyes look straight at a questioner. Mr. Farrell's grip is that of an athlete, and he is popular with his five children.

"My father, John Farrell, who had several small vessels plying between New York and Liverpool, was growing old, and it was up to me to quit school and go to work," says Mr. Farrell in describing his career. "So I began in a steel wire mill at New Haven at sixteen and remained there nine years, doing manual labor. Then I saw a bigger field in Pittsburgh and went there when I was twenty-five.

Soon Became Leader.

"I entered the mills of the Pittsburgh Wire company as a laborer and later became superintendent and manager for about six years. Then I got the general superintendency of the Oliver Steel Wire company in Pittsburgh and worked there and at Beaver Falls. In 1908 I was asked to come to New York to organize the United States Steel Products Export company."

When asked regarding his views on corporate publicity Mr. Farrell said:

"I have always been in favor of corporate publicity along the lines expressed by Judge Gary. I came to those views not because some other man believed them, but because I have believed them through many years of practical experience. I am frank to state, however, that it is well in any business to hold views along the same general lines of others higher in authority. If a man does not, then he can get out."

ONE MAN HOLDS 500 JOBS.

Is Border Line Organizer and Clerk of Corporations.

Performing the duties of 500 offices by one individual may seem no easy task, but that is just what Representative Elect Horace Mitchell of Kitty, Me., does. He is the champion officeholder in the Pine Tree State. These offices are not all public offices, but are those bestowed by corporations, for Mr. Mitchell, who has taken advantage of his location on the border line between Maine and New Hampshire to engage in the organization of corporations under the Maine law, is the clerk of over 500 corporations, not to mention at least half a dozen public offices that are his.
