JOHN M. OGLESBY Concord, N. C., April 13, 1911.

The Lenoir News, a wide-awake pa per published in a wide-awake town. has started a subscription for the Bill Nye Memorial building at the Train-Carolina Press Associacion. This work has been undertaken by the Press Association, and it must be accomplished. While a number of the newspapers have raised subscriptions through their papers, we regret to note that nothing has yet been done by the large majority. The newspapers of the State could raise $10,000 for this purpose within thirty days if they would make the effort in a systematic and determined way. The annual meeting of the Press Association will be held in Lenoir June 20, and we would like to see the report to be amount necessary for the cottage has been raised.

LORINGE IN THE SENATE.

Chicagoan Conducts Himself Among His Associates. New York World.

Monday was a typical day in the Senste for William Lorimer, of Illi-nois. He arrived from Chicago at 10.25 A. M. He had breakfast on the train with Judge Hancey, his counsel. He went from the station to his room in the Senate office building, put on a clean collar and a fresh white lawn tie and appeared in the Senate chamber one minute after the Senate con vened. He is, ordinarily, on time.

One of the Senator's cardinal prin ciples is to waste no time. He goes to hicago every week. He regulates the day of his departure by the condition of legislative business Upon entering the Senate chamber Monday Mr. Lorimer immediately occupied his seat in the rear row on the Republican side. Most of the time he sits with his hands clasped across his expansive stomach. He always leans vell back. He watches the proceedings with much care. He is a man of few words and never gossips with his neighbors unless they first address him. His face normally wears a half smile He wears a double-breasted sack cont ing School to be erected by the North suit and an appearance of benign benevolence.

When anybody speaks to him Mr. arimer responds gladly. Since the charges of bribery and corruption were prefered against him he has made no advances of friendliness on his own initiative. He gives every Senator an opportunity to speak to im or not, as they prefer.

The Occasion of George V.

Statesmen and other soldiers form every part of the vast British Empire will meet in London at this time and symbolize in their presents the dazzling diversity of King George's foreign possessions. Among the colored potentates who have signified their intention to be present are the Maharajah of Jeppore, the Maharajah of Nahhs, the Rajah of Sikkim, the Maharajah of Jubbalpore, the Maharajah of Jubbalpore, the Maharajah of Jubbalpore, the Maharajah of Ferak, the Chief of the Solomon Islands, the King of the Younis, and the Jam of Navanagar. These darkskinned gulers, with their satin robes of all the colors of the rainbow, and their pearls and diamonds, will add much to the brillismoy and interest of the spectacle, which will cone the British nation some twenty-five million dollars, to say nothing of huge private amonalities. The Wadesboro Ansonian, discussing the high cost of living, points out the great expense to which merchants are put in delivering pur-chases—much of which might be obvinted. One firm, it reports, tells of sending its delivery wagon to the small telephone orders, the amounting to less than a load for the wagon. Another carried a loaf of bread a mile and a half-the profit on the sale being one cent. Another was asked to send a 5-rent spool of cot ton beyond the town limits in order to be exchanged for one of another number. These instances may appear to be extreme, but we are con fident that the average retail mer chant would have no trouble in duplicating them from his experience wa hout overestimating his mmory

None the less, we cannot see much hope that the ratter will be remedied. Modern business competition requires the retail merchant to go to the li of possibility in delivering purchase to customers; if he does not his competitor wil make havoe with his trade. Equally necessary it is it that he put on at least the appearance of cheerfulness when sending his man and wagon on a three-mile jaunt for the sake of one cent profit. Under these conditions the buying public has been some badly spoiled. The merchant perforce shows eager apreciation of the busines given him, no matter how small its volume or great the lack of foresight bestowed upon the transaction by the customer. Allowed an inch, to take an ell is strictly in the Hine with human nature, and the latter has been found somewhat difficult of serious modification.
