

TRIBUTE TO UNKNOWN DEAD OF THE NATION

An Endless Procession of People, Great and Small, Moved Through the Rotunda of the Capitol Today.

FLOWERS HEAPED ON SOLDIER'S BIER

A Wreath From King George Was Among Them—Hour by Hour Flowers on Casket Grew Mountain High.

(By the Associated Press.) Washington, Nov. 10.—Great and small folk moved in endless procession today through the rotunda of the capitol to pay tribute to the unknown dead lying in state here as only national Presidents had known. This day was set aside for it. All who could speak for groups in the land, or for powers of the world, were free to place their floral offerings at his bier. Hour by hour the heaping flowers about his casket grew mountain high and spread about his casket. Flowers that bloomed in France were there, and flowers that grew in all their beauty in South Africa, 1,000 miles away.

There was not a minute of the day unclaimed by those who would do honor to the dead. There was no organization of veterans or of patriotic people over the land unrepresented.

Among the most formal of the pilgrimages to this shrine of patriotic valor was that planned by the British embassy. From the embassy building there was arranged a parade headed by Arthur R. Balfour, head of the British delegation, and Sir Auckland Geddes, British ambassador. Nearly a score of automobiles formed the procession and two motor trucks carried the flowers.

A wreath from King George was among them. Lord Cavan acting for the King. It bore the legend: "As unknown and well known: 'As dying and beheld we live.' There was a wreath too from Canada. Its inscription said: "But that which put the glory of grace into all that he did was that he did it in sure..."

And what from India said: "Nations, yet his name liveth forever." And that from India said: "They never die who die to make life worth living."

There were wreaths also from Australia and New Zealand and of these except that from India were made of flowers grown in English soil.

From the Grand Army of C. V. of Canada came a wreath placed by Sgt. Richardson, the oldest living warrior of the Victoria cross. There were flowers from New Zealand and from Army and Navy Veterans of the Canada came a memorial woven of poppies that bloom in Flanders fields.

And besides all civil dignitaries Great Britain sent to pay homage, went Earl Beatty, admiral of the fleet, her vice-marshal Higgins and others, whose roles in the war in which this unknown soldier died were great. The flowers actually were handled by his comrades in many of the British service men who also fought in France or on the sea in the great struggle.

By 10 o'clock a steady stream of people—soldiers, men, women and children, white and black—had begun an unending march through the rotunda.

Secretary Weeks, Assistant Secretary Malvern, and Gen. Harbord were on hand, waiting to receive the foreign delegations. Floral designs from every state, on each of which was the state shield, completed circled the rotunda.

All the delegations came in from the north entrance and stood by the catafalque for the ceremony as the line continued to stream through.

NAVAL POLICY PLAN IS NOT MADE PUBLIC

No One Knows What American Delegates Will Offer to the Conference on Limitation of Armaments.

DEFINITE POLICY CHOSEN, HOWEVER

But It Is Rumored That Suggestions Are Too Drastic for Acceptance at the Present Time.

(By the Associated Press.) Washington, Nov. 10.—Proposals to be made by the American delegates to the conference on the limitation of armaments apparently constitute the only question presented in advance as to ways and means of curtailing naval expenditures without a sacrifice of national security. Great Britain is not known to have worked out any formula; Japan is awaiting the American suggestion; France and Italy are more concerned with land forces than with a navy.

Two days before the conference opens the American proposals remain a closely guarded secret. It is doubtful if any but President Harding, the four American delegates, and possibly the highest officials of the navy department, know what the proposals are. This much is known: A definite formula for agreement on the limitation of naval forces has been reached by Secretary Hughes and his colleagues of the American delegation. The formula is an entirely practical one. It does not attempt to state any general rule for establishing equitable relative of naval forces between the powers. It does not attempt to fix a common denominator by which all the navies could be divided, and each power assigned by agreement the number of units it could maintain with world approval.

The American suggestion will deal with things as they are. It will be a plain proposition of ships—built, building or authorized; of naval bases; of the vital elements of naval replacement; of the potential naval significance of merchant marines, and of coast defense, existing or planned weapons and auxiliaries of naval warfare. Also it is regarded by those who framed the suggestion as a bold stroke for naval reduction; possibly too bold for immediate realization.

Beyond this limited outline of what is going on behind the scenes nothing as yet has been available. Washington is filled, however, with conjecture as to what the American delegation will propose. There are almost as many theories as there are men to talk about it, and their names are legion.

"Out of the Night," at the Star Today. From the darkness of a fog-dimmed street a young and beautiful girl emerges, slowly, alone, into the misty halo of a curb light. This suggests the title of "Out of the Night," by E. Lloyd Sheldon, a Frank A. Keeney production which is to be shown on the screen at the Star theatre today. But the title has a more than material significance. It describes in a poetic way the emergence of a young soul from the outer darkness beyond the pale of society into the light of love and home. The picture stars the beautiful Catherine Calvert, supported by Herbert Rawlinson, one of the most popular young luminaries of the screen.

CARTER GLASS SPEAKS

The Churches Failed Christianity When They Failed to Press for the League of Nations.

(By the Associated Press.) Richmond, Nov. 10.—"Had the Christian churches of this country exhibited the same degree of interest in the league of nations they are now manifesting in the disarrangement of the nation it would have held its place in the high esteem of the world," United States Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia, declared in a letter to John Stuart Bryan, publisher of a local newspaper, made public today. The letter added: "The churches in a large part failed Christianity in the supreme test to which it has been put since the angels in Heaven sang of Christ's advent and mission on earth. As I wrote a preacher friend of mine in Virginia the other day, the church is getting religion too late. Its awakening should have come when the greatest Christian statesman of all time summoned the nations of the earth to enter into a covenant which contained the very essence of the Sermon on the Mount and was the consummation as far as the Christian nations could contrive of the sacrifice on Calvary."

KING'S DAUGHTERS MEETING

Select Greenville as the 1922 Meeting Place for Convention—No Opposition to Selection.

MEMORIAL SERVICE FEATURE YESTERDAY

Bridge Presented to Training School and Window Dedicated—Thirty-Five Delegates Were Present.

The 32nd annual convention of the North Carolina branch of the King's Daughters and Sons came to a close last night after selecting Greenville as the 1922 meeting place. Officers were chosen at the morning session yesterday, all old officers being re-elected.

The afternoon session proved the most interesting of the entire convention, memorial services being held at that time. Features of the service were the dedication of the memorial window in the Jackson Training school chapel and the presentation to the school of the bridge connecting the chapel with the other buildings of the institution. The chapel was erected of stone gathered around the school property and the windows was purchased by the Daughters. The bridge is also constructed of stone and forms an arch over the national highway. It was erected by the Daughters. The dedication service was conducted by Rev. M. A. Barber, of Raleigh. The bridge was presented to the school by Mrs. D. V. Cooper, of Henderson, and was accepted by J. P. Cook, chairman of the board of directors of the institution.

The session last night was devoted almost entirely to story telling, and was most informal. Devotional exercises were conducted by Rev. J. Frank Armstrong, and singine by the boys of the Training School proved one of the features.

Among the speakers of the evening were: D. B. Coltrane, Mrs. T. W. Bickett, Mrs. Cherry, Mrs. Lawson, Miss Shaw and Miss Russell. Pledges received amounted to $500.

One of the most interesting features of the convention was the march escorted by the boys of the Training School to the delegates, members of the Stowell Circle and their friends yesterday at 1 o'clock. More than 150 persons enjoyed the "feed" which was not only deliciously prepared, but was also served in abundance.

Stut. Charles E. Boger had the boys of the school to prepare a room of exhibits, and everyone present at the barbecue found much of interest in the exhibit room. Canned goods, cooked, canned and labeled by the participants in the convention were prepared by the boys; uniforms and overalls made by the boys; and darning work by the boys, were among the exhibits. The dinner included sweet potatoes, Irish potatoes, rice, baked chicken, corn bread, muffins, cakes and pies, showing plainly that among the students at the school there are many fine cooks.

Thirty-five delegates were present for the convention and they were entertained at the Training school. All of them returned to their homes today. The following is Mrs. Cooper's presentation speech:

Friends, the King's Daughters and Sons, Boys of the Stowell Jackson Training School: It is a great privilege to be here on this occasion and to have the honor of presenting this beautiful Bridge. It is a gift of love from the N. C. Branch of the King's Daughters and Sons, a memorial to our own North Carolina men who gave their lives for their country and the humanity's sake. The first two who were to lay down their lives from North Carolina were from this school, Daniel Poplin and George Holden, killed in action.

Is it not wonderful to know that two of your companions who walked and talked with you were willing to go to foreign fields to fight and there gave up their young and strong lives for you and me? Whenever we cross this Bridge let us remember them, feeling they have passed over the Bridge of human desires and aspirations on the highway of life and entered we trust and believe into the beautiful fields of paradise. Do you boys know who first suggested the King's Daughters taking up this grand Stowell Jackson School and who by her efforts and prayers made it possible? Mrs. W. H. S. Hargrave, President of the N. C. Branch of the King's Daughters and Sons, she has worked and prayed over it for many years. The King's Daughters built the first cottage then the Margaret Burgwyn Chapel and this Bridge, which links the two. The first edition of human goodness is something to love, the second, something to reverence, so dear boys, love each other and your teachers, reverence God and His house.

In presenting this Bridge from the King's Daughters and Sons to Mr. Cook for the Stowell Jackson Training School let me add a word of praise and gratitude to Mr. Cook, Mr. Coltrane, Mr. Boger and their associates for the grand and unselfish work they have done and are doing, making useful men for the good of the State and the world.

God's blessings will surely rest upon them for He says, "In as much as ye did it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto Me."
