Foiling the Man Who "Listens-In." New York, March 15 .- One can nev r be sure with the ordinary telephone that someone is not listening-in on the private conversation. If there is a party-wire every person who shares line can, if he wishes, hear all that is said. A new invention makes the telephone, even if its is on a party line, absolutely secret. Called the super-phone, it consists of a combination of vireless and ordinary telephone sets. What the inventor has done is to devise a means of sending wireless waves along a wire. The radio waves move so rapidly that they have no affeet upon either eye or ear, but by means of a special process which is the keynote of the superphone, they can be made to keep to a single wire. At a receiving end a detector transforms the rapid wireless wave into a slower beat, which the telephone makes FIRPO AND DEMPSEY audible to the human ear. The waves of any station are of a certain length, and no other stations can receive them unless they are tun-ed exactly to their pitch. Each of the sets on a party line under the new system has a different wave length o that no instrument can hear any thing of a message intended for another. As many conversations as desired can be carried on simultaneous
