EASY TO DARKEN YOUR GRAY HAIR

You Can Bring Back Color and Lustre With Sage Tea and Sulphur

When you darken your hair with Sage Tea and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it's done so naturally, so evenly. Preparing this mixture, though, at home is messy and troublesome. At little cost you can buy at any drug store the ready-to-use preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning all gray hair disappears, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully darkened, glossy and luxuriant.

Gray, faded hair, though no disgrace, is a sign of old age, and as we all desire a youthful and attractive appearance, get busy at once with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound and look years younger.

Youthful Tourists Bring Home New Steps to Be Used in Modern Dances

Latest Steps From Waikiki.

San Francisco, Cal., June 9.—When public dancing first came into vogue about ten years ago, with the "turkey trot," dancing masters and other devotees of tepidshore declared that the craze was but a passing fancy and that a few months would again find dancing confined to private functions. How they were mistaken the world is a whole knows. Now dancing is unquestionably the most popular universal pastime, with steps created in New York, New Orleans, Chicago or San Francisco being stepped all over the world, introduced into the capitals of the leading nations by the ever-moving army of American tourists.

The worshippers of the great god "Jazz" are a legion, and always on the lookout for new figures to embody in their dances, with the result that one who yesterday may have been considered the best "stepper" in his or her community, today may have no standing as a dancer at all, having failed to keep up with the over-night changes suddenly introduced. New dance steps are coming from the Orient, being brought here by tourists on the Pacific Mail lines.

Though the majority of the dances of the modern school, the "Chicago," "Balconades," and "Toddle," are American creations, either gotten up by professional dancers or expert amateurs, the inspiration for the steps on which they are based, the rhythm of the music to which they are danced, are, in the main, of foreign origin.

The American tourist, always in search of something new when abroad, whether it be in clothing, scenery or entertainment, is mainly responsible for the new steps in the jazz curriculum.

Passengers returning from the Orient and Hawaii on the steamships of the Pacific Mail Line are leaders in this connection. Witnessing the age-old steps of the Chinese tea house girls, the geisha girls of Japan, the hula dancers of Honolulu, the younger tourists see possibilities for astonishing their friends at home with new versions of the fox trot, and once back aboard ship, set to work, with the assistance of the liner's orchestra, to adapt the steps to ragtime.

A party of school girls and college men who recently toured the Orient on the Pacific Mail Liner President Cleveland kept the orchestra aboard working overtime while they developed a new dance embodying movements they had witnessed in various cities they had visited. The finished dance, as yet unnamed, promised to startle even the most blasé of the younger dancing set.

Though everyone, naturally, does not take to dancing of the jazz variety, the dance, however, is one of the most popular forms of diversion on ship board, and those older passengers who find no delight in the newer fox trot and kindred dances do take considerable pleasure in floating through the measures of
