

Lauzanne Peace Treaty Formally Signed Today

Treaty Formally Establishing Peace Between the European Powers and Turkey Signed at 3:15 p. m.

TURKEY REGAINS EASTERN THRACE

Constantinople Given Definitely to Turkey.—The Armenian Question Unsettled—All Troops Withdrawn.

Lausanne, July 24 (By the Associated Press).—The Lausanne peace treaty formally establishing peace between European powers and Turkey was signed today. The treaty was signed at 3:15 p. m.

By the treaty of Lausanne which was signed today, Turkey regains eastern Thrace and becomes the bridge between the East and West.

Constantinople goes definitely to Turkey. All foreign troops will be withdrawn. The treaty makes peace between Greece and Turkey.

It permits the patriarchs of the Greek orthodox church to remain in Constantinople.

It launches one of the most stupendous and in some ways the most cruel human movements in history by its compulsory exchange of population, the Greeks in Turkey returning to Greece, and the Turks in Greece returning to Turkey.

It fails to solve the Armenian problem, Armenians being obliged to find new havens.

It reduces Turkey's size by its recognition of detached mandates, state the Syria, Mesopotamia and Palestine.

With one stroke of the pen it rids Turkey of judicial capitulations such as China vainly sought to accomplish for itself at Washington, and which Japan achieved only after two decades of struggle.

In only one way is Turkey treated differently from other countries; foreign legal advisers will be empowered to receive complaints relating to the arrest and imprisonment of foreigners.

The American diplomatic representatives, headed by Jos. C. Grew, minister to Switzerland, were prominent in all sessions of the conference. As observers they played a dominating role in the last phases.

They successfully insisted upon inclusion in the treaty of clauses enforcing the application of the principles of the open door and equal opportunity.

Attempts to gain preferential treatment in the future of economic contracts for foreign countries were defeated, as was also the effort to validate the disputed British concessions in the petroleum fields of Mesopotamia.

Turkey has been at war for twelve consecutive years, and the conclusion of the Lausanne negotiations gives her a sorely needed opportunity for a period of national reconstruction and development.

The general treaty formally ending the state of war, was signed by Great Britain, France, Italy, Japan, Greece, Roumania and Turkey.

Jugo-Slavia announced at the last minute her refusal to sign, on the ground that to do so would be harmful to her national interests. The treaty distributes the Ottoman debt among countries like Jugo-Slavia, which acquired parts of the former Ottoman Empire.

Jugo-Slavia has agreed to negotiate directly with the European powers regarding her possible responsibility in connection with the Turkish debt.
