TEXT—Martha was cumbered about much serving, and came to Him, and said. Lord, doss thou not care that my sister hath left me to serve alone? Bid her therefore that she help me. And Jesus answered and said unto her. Martha, Martha, thou art careful and troubled about many things: But one thing is needful; and Mary hath chosen that good part, which shall not be taken away from her.—Luke 10.40-42.

Never were there such great plans of world-wide work set before the church as today.

We are confronted with a program of activities that in its magnitude ar scope is nearly verwhelming. Service is the creed of every denomination and the universal trend of every sermon. It is, deed, a day for the busy, bustling Marthas. The Marys are over-looked, if not re-upon indolence. Notice that the scene of the text is placed immediately after the parable of the Good Samaritan. Sunday school at 9:45 a. m. Chief service at 11 a. m. Sermon by Rev. R. L. In the one, great stress is laid upon everyone being up and doing, in the other there is pointed out the danger of a heartless serv ice.

Christ plainly points to a paradox. Christ plainty points to a paradox. There is such a thing as doing more by doing less. Yes, there is something better than service. It is well to serve, but better still to offer acceptable. able service. Martha wanted to serve Christ, but Mary wanted to receive Christ. Mary had chosen to sympathize. When her brother died it was not the that moved the Master. Mary's communion with Jesus brought her so near to His heart that when the time of trouble came she knew where to go for comfort. Some people are so busy that they never experience the comforts of the Scripture and the consolation of the Holy Spirit. They become so hardened in service that they cannot shed the sympathizing tear. No amount of service will take the place of sympathy and it is only sympathetic service that serves. Paul served in tears, warned in tears, and wrote in tears.

State to Investigate Retail Price of "Gas."

Raligh, Aug. 16.—The reduction of gasoline costs by two cents the gallon will have no effect on Attorney General Manning's move to investigate the price of the fuel in North Carolina, it was stated at his office today. Wholesale dealers throughout the state have been asked to appear before the attorney general August 27 for a conference on the price of gasoline.

The Standard Oil company and the Texas company recently announced reduction of two cents on the gallon in the Carolinas. A few days prior to that announcement Judge Manning sent out notices to wholesale dealers calling them for a conference with him. The conference will be held and the investigation innugurated to determine the reasonableness of profits and charges regardless of the action of the two big gasoline companies, it was said.
