After a luncheon-contenue at the white hours, there are all to the anounced intention of getting in touch at once with representatives of the miner and operator groups. It was stated that no definite proposal had been evolved at the white house meeting and Governor Pinchot's first move would be to ascertain whether a basis for further discussion exists, despite the unequivocal tenor of the statements issued at the conclusion of the Atlantic City conference.

Describing the relations of Governor Pinchot to the federal authorities as "solely co-operative," a spokesman for the President pointed out that his selection was a particularly happy one because the anthracite fields are located almost exclusively in Pennsylvania and because of the unusual legislative safeguards thrown around the industry by state laws. The possibility of the Pennsylvania statues licensing mine operations being used in the effort to reach a settlement was discounted by Mr. Pinchot, however.

of one or more crops for one or more different crops is not diversification, and the horticulturist must practice the highest type of diversification to insure his success."

Diversification, he explained, has an entirely different meaning. It not only means the growing of a variety of fruits and vegetables and other crops, but also the keeping of some livestock, of various kinds, the production of food for the farmer himself and his family, the growing of timber in order to insure a supply of wood, and the surrounding of his homes with plants and flowers to make his house attractive and his homelife happier, Mr. Pillsbury continued.

"The point is," he said, "that with the horticulturist his horticultural specialty is merely dominant and occupies the position of his chief interest. The other things are added to his stock of interests to make his specialty secure. He finds it not only economically necessary, but profitable, in many ways."

The farmer must get rid of the idea that this is an, age of specialists, he decitive, teachioritie, that as, far as he is concerned it is not, except in large corporations, educational institutions and is some cases extensive farming operations.

"It still takes an all-round man." Mr. Pillsbury said he believed, "to run a farm, and the smaller the farm, the bigger the man must be in his knowledge of agricultural principles, such as soil and other natural elements, the kinds and varieties of crops that he can grow to advantage and of the means and expedients best adapted to his needs for diversification in his particular situation and of how to utilize his products to the best advantage. Farms are becoming smaller and smaller every day by subdivision and the day of the garden type of farming, as a carried on in the older countries, is not far away."

New York, Aug. 25.—Characterizing the references to Woodrow Wilson by Viscount Birkenhead, formerly lord chancellor of England, in his address before Williamston Institute of Politics as "impudent" Henry Breckenride, assistant secretary of war under Wilson, today protested in a letter to John W. Davis, president of the American Bar Association, against the Viscount's being permitted to speak before the association's annual convention.

Mr. Breckenridge urged that if it proved "necessary" for Viscount Birkenhead to make the scheduled address, it "be intimated to him that the expression of such opinion concerning a great American statesman is distasteful and intolerable to any self respecting American audience."

Williamstown, Mass., Aug. 25 (By the Associated Press).—In an appeal to America to join the allies in winning peace, the Earl of Birkenhead, former lord chancellor of Great Britain, emplasized in the final lecture of the Institute of Politics last night that self interest alone should determine the country's course. Lord Birkenhead declared the world probably would survive if idealism were given a completely free reign; no nation in a democratic condition would ever become the knight errant of the world. He said Mr. Wilson's judgment of his countrymen was wrong and through this error he became the agent of all post-war developments, from which his altruistic mind would have recoiled.

He insisted that Germany should be
