Prince Yamashina and Wife Are Among Those Reported Killed-Imperial Palace Not Wholly Destroyed.

Shanghai. Sept. 3 (By the Associated Press).—With the remnants of Tokio's stricken population reported still escaping from certain wards of the city, the fires continued to range in sections at 1 o'clock this morning, according to a telegram from the police of the Osaka prefecture. Soldiers were destroying buildings in the immediate path of the flames.

Prince Yamashina and Princess Kaya who were injured, now are reported dead. Marquit Matsukata, one of the two mem-bers of the elder statesmen advisers to the crown, is reported injured seriously. City Practically Destroyed.

All markets throughout Japan have been closed.

The terrible plight of population in Tokio and Yokohama is graphically depicted in various newspaper dispatches received here. So acute has the food shortage become in the capital that the hungry people have been trying to catch the carp in the pond in Hibiya Park,

It is estimated that at least 1,000 tons of rice are needed in Tokio alone. Quantity actually available cannot be determined as fire had destroyed considerable stocks.

The authorities are making great efforts to collect supplies to ship to Tokio. Meanwhile the price of rice is rising.

So extensive is the damage to Tokio that it is possible the national capital may be transferred temporarily to Kyoto or to this city. The Prince Regent is taking an active hand in the relief work and has refused to rest. He has given orders that the imperial palace be, thrown open for refugees.

30 miles an hour when the accident happened.

While no personal injuries have been reported from the Linwood accident, the wreck from the standpoint of property damage and delays to traffic, is regarded as one of the most serious which has occurred on the Danville division of the Southern for several years.

In the week of clearing the tracks, the burning of the wreck occasioned great delays and presented a situation fraught with great difficulties. Wrecking crews reached the scene promptly, but there were no means available for quenching the fire. Men worked laboriously in the heat of the roaring flames but they could accomplish little until the fire had completed its work of destruction. When the wreck was practically burned there were left great heaps of glowing embers, red hot iren and fiery masses of wrecked materials on the grounds where the wrecking crews had to do their work. The element of time entered largely into the work, since every minute of delay meant a longer tie-up for traffic over a most important section of rails.
