are among the prominent veterans here for the reunion.

Other prominent Confederate soldiers also will be here; among them Major General A. H. Boyden, Salisbury; Col. A. L. Smith, chief of staff; Major Stedman, member of congress from the fifth district, and others.

Major Stedman will deliver an address on the subject "North Carolina in the War Between the States." Col. Smith will make a historical report. Major General Boyden will reply to the addresses of welcome to be made by Mayor James G. Hanes and by representatives of various organizations, including the American Legion, the United Daughters of the Confederacy and the United Sons of the Confederacy.

An interesting feature of the first day's program will be an address on "From One Soldier to Another," by Brigadier General T. J. Brawley, U. S. A., commanding officer of Fort Bragg, N. C. Major General Smith, as commander of the North Carolina division of the United Confederate Veterans, will preside at all sessions of the reunion.

Major General Smith was born January 11, 1845, near Ansonville, where his present home, "The Oaks," a stately old southern colonial residence, is located. He enlisted in the Confederate army, early in 1861, joining a company captained by his brother, Charles E. Smith. The outfit, a color company, was known as the "Anson Guards." Major General Smith is a guard to the color bearer. It was while serving in this capacity that he, then a lad of 19, fell seriously wounded. Today he carries a crutch, a significant symbol of the price he paid to aid the cause of the Confederacy. E. F. Fenton, who recently answered the final roll call, wrote of the young soldier's sacrifice:

"The writer picked up the bloody and desperately wounded boy lying nearest the enemy's guns, faint from the loss of blood, having lain on the field all night. Without a murmur or a groan from him, we bore him to the rear. We never left his side until we placed him in the tender care of his loving and praying mother. For six months General Smith hovered between life and death."

After the war the young color guard was made Brigadier General of the second brigade, by commission. He was made Major General in command of the North Carolina division of the United Confederate Veterans at Chattanooga in 1921.

Major Giles Buckner Cooke, the last surviving member of General Lee's staff, will relate his experiences while serving the famous general's staff, at the morning session of the second day of the reunion.

Major Cooke, who is 85 years old, was a student in a mathematics class at the Virginia Military Institute before the Civil War under "Old Jack," destined to become known as General "Stonewall" Jackson. Later Major Cooke came into contact with the fearless general in a military capacity.

Major Cooke also served on the staffs of Brigadier General Philip St. George Cooke, Major General Sam Jones, Lieutenant General Braxton Bragg, and General Beauregard. He was present at the surrender at Appomattox and signed his name with other members of the general's staff to the parole ending the service of their troops with the Confederacy.

After the war Major Cooke entered the ministry of the Episcopal church. He served several dioceses until last April, when his health broke down at Portersmouth, Va., going then to make his home at Matthews Courthouse. It is said that Major Cooke resolved to enter the ministry while he was serving an General Cooke's staff at Alexandria, Va.

FINDS BUSINESS DEAD IN SOUTHERN RUSSIA

Practically No Trade on the Black Sea Under Soviet Rule. (By the Associated Press.)

London, Sept. 4.—South Russia at present offers no golden opportunities for American business men, according to John H. Lang, of Seattle, who recently passed through this city on his way home after 18 months in Odessa and other Black Sea ports, where he was in charge of port operations for the American Relief Administration.

"There is practically no trade on the Black Sea," said Mr. Lang. "Even Greek and Armenian traders have given up in despair, and everyone who knows the Black Sea realizes that when these traders find unsurmountable obstacles to commerce, there must be something serious the matter."

"The new economic policy of the Soviet was heralded as a long expected loosening of government control, and when it was inaugurated more than a year ago the people had great hopes that a new era was dawning in communistic Russia. But such hopes were soon dashed."

"After shopkeepers had opened their doors with what little stocks they could get, they found that the government officials were waiting only for trade to be resumed to impose ruinous taxes. These taxes made business impossible for shopkeepers, for importers and exporters alike."

Harvest prospects in South Russia are excellent, according to Mr. Lang, who said that nobody in Russia should go hungry this winter.

Well Answered.

When Charles IX, king of France, asked Lasso who, in his estimation, was happiest, the poet answered: "God." "Everybody knows that," said the king, "but who is next?" And Lasso answered: "He who becomes most like to God."

Looking Into the Future.

The next generation will be that of the eminent village. The son of the farmer will no longer be dazzled and destroyed by the fires of the metropolis. He will travel, but only for what he can bring back.—Vachel Lindsay.

"Muscular Christianity."

The expression, muscular Christianity, may be described as healthy or strong-minded religion, which braces a man to fight the battle of life bravely and manfully. The expression was first used by the late Charles Kingsley, a noted preacher and writer of the Church of England.

Spencer Wrecking Crew Clearing up Lin-wood Debris.

Spencer, Sept. 3.—The big wrecking crew outfit from Spencer shops was still working today on the cleaning up of the fragments of 64 merchandise cars which burned in a wreck at Linwood early Sunday morning.

The wreck tied up all southbound trains for several hours during which passenger trains from Washington were derailed at Greensboro via Barbers and Charlotte. The wreck is said to have been caused by a draw head pulling out about the middle of a southbound freight in charge of Conductor John Fowler.

It happened that the train stopped near where some trash was burning near the tracks and in some manner the fire got to the box cars loaded with merchandise.

No water being in reach the train crew was of course, powerless to save the property, and the loss may reach many thousands of dollars.

On account of the excessive heat from the burning cars the wrecking crew was unable to clear the tracks until at least a part of the burning debris had been removed. Southbound No. 37, a solid Pullman train, was the first to pass the scene of the wreck running several hours late.

The train wrecked was a southbound extra through freight of 60 cars pulled by engine No. 4756, a large locomotive of the Mikado type. Engineer Besley was at the throttle and Conductor Fowler was in charge of the train. The breaking of a draw head on the freight car second from the engine is assigned by the train crew as the cause of the derailment which occurred at a point two miles north of the Linwood station. Trainmen report the train was running 30 miles an hour when the accident happened.

Taste is a matter of tobacco quality

We state it as our honest belief that the tobaccos used in Chesterfield are of finer quality (and hence of better taste) than in any other cigarette at the price.

The Evanston, Ill., News-Index has been advocating a cleanup of streets and alleys, going so far, in fact, as to print front page boxes headed "Beautiful Evanston—the dirtiest city in the world." The Commissioner of Street and Alleys responded by starting the cleanup, swearing out warrants for ten citizens.

And the first warrant served was upon A. H. Bowman, editor of the News-Index. It charged him with having an inadequate garbage can in the rear of his home.
