Salisbury. Nov. 16.—Draper Robbins, a young man of Davils in county, several days ago played a sea fitte trick on Register of Deeds Max Barker, of this city. Accompanied by a male friend and a woman, the latter presumably his sweetheart, Robbins applied for license to marry. Mr. Barker did not need to take a second look at the woman to determine that she was of lawful age and so he had no hesitancy in issuing the needed papers. It developed later, however, that the bride-to-be was another and a younger woman and that there was parental objection intervened and the wedding was prevented, the father of the girl having a warrant issued for Rebbins and his male companion. The woman in the case was not included in the prosecution and Robbins' male companion was allowed to go on a suspended judgment. Robbins got this judgment in the county court: "Thirty days on the roads, capias to issue at any county in North Carolina in the event the defendant and prosecuting witness, Grace Helen Hayes, are nurried within two years from date with out the

Cabarrus Savings

Saved and Serving

By REV. H. OSTROM, D. D. Bible Institute, Chicago,

Of whom is this we read? Is it some sacrificing doctor hurrying after midnight to want the wounds of a patient? Or is it patient? Or is it some mother awakened out of her social needed sleep to feed the hungry child of her love and care? A jailer? What? Would at man in charge of a prison under the old Beman govern. Reman govern ment stoop to such a service? A few hours before this man had "thrust Paul and Silas into the inner prison, and made their feet fast in the stocks." But now in the dead of night we and him washing their stripes and setting meat before them. What has secured? Oh, much!

much!
We must examine the incident and them. What has secured? Oh, much!

We must examine the incident and observe the wonder of it. It is not an ordinary one. An earthquake, a reding earth, and fear of punishment should the prisoners entrusted to his keeping escape, intimidated the callous failer. But the tunguit about him was as nothing to that within him which shook his soul out of the slothed shi into peace with God. That one hour must have meant more than centuries to him. His soul struggle must have been intense.

What was his first step towards peace? He asked the way to be saved. He us also start there.

I. "What must I do to be saved?" Why say "must."? Firy the man who so lightly regards his responsibility to God or is so devoid of reverence that concerning his soul, welfare he is content to say "may" or "might" in stead of "must." Pity an age that would tune its thinking to the pitch of mere probability or convenience and thus cheapen the whole procedure of human living and at the same time rate God as a mere mental accommodation to our hazardous do-aswe-pleases way of living. This jailer was not loccupied with schemes of self-advancement or by the thought that the events of the night might mean the lose of his position. He was dealing with greater issues. "What must I do to be saved?"

Its We cannot get away from that stripe-bathing. From blows and crusty he was turned to ministaring and healing. Was it not the act of a saved man? Yes, that is it: the man had been saved. His act was not merely assent, he had come to realize his perishing condition. And he had accepted rescue, "A new creature in Christ Jesus"! It was a real work of grace.

And that meal of victuals! This was grace.

And that meal of victuals! This was walking "in newness of life," It is after believing that a man washes the wounds of, and carries bread to, the preacher. Having been haptised in the name of the Lord Jesus, he proceeds to act in the Jesus-way. It is ever so. Infidels and believers alike affirm that by really believing on Jesus Christ a man's conduct becomes Christilke.

What was the secret? We-have but the defendant and prosecuting witness, Grace Helen Hayes, are nurried within two years from date without the written approval of her father."

Come On, Cal, and "Tell It to the Judge."

Salisbury, Nov. 16.—Prohibition officers from the Salisbury headquarters have unearthed a ten gallon keg of rye whiskey under a chicken coop in the western part of the county. It had been neatly buried in the poultry jot. Cal Godby, who was in charge of the poultry yard, will tell Judge Webb at the next term of Federal Court how the whiskey came to be buried on his premises.
