Home of Policeman Now.

A story strikingly similar to that of the infant Moses is being told here today by police officers who tell of finding a tiny baby boy in a patch of woods in No. 5 township this morning. The hiding place of this modern child was not so different from that of the ancient babe, for although the deserters of the babe found this morning had used broom straw and weeds to hide his resting place instead of bull rushes, they had wrapped him in swadling clothes and had given him a basket for a crib.

The finding of the babe was reported by members of the family of Mr. Edmund Cook, who lives about six miles from Concord, in No. 5 township, on the old Salisbury Road. As soon as the child was found the police officers were nottified and they secured the boy and brought him to Concord.

The kind Providence that guarded the destiny of this babe was surely the same that watched over Moses, for the sam child was found the police officers were notified and they secured the boy and brought him to Concord.

The kind Providence that guarded the destiny of this babe was surely the same that watched over Moses, for the fact that the child was alive when found is nothing less than a miracle. Every fact established so far in the case proves proves almost conclusively that the child had been deserted a few hours after his birth and had lain for hours in the steady, hard rain that fell Friday and Friday night. Although half frozen from his horrible exposure, the child was still living when found and so far as can be determined now, he will continue to live. Friday afternoon, according to information secured by pedice officers, some member of Mr. Cook's family saw a basket in a patch of woods near his home. Little was thought of it at the time, but when the busket was seen again this marsing a list acres. The still have been the busket was seen again this marsing a list acres. The still have been too cold to move and too near dead to make complaint even in baby language. A hurried examination showed that the child was still alive, so it was carried to Mr. Cook's home and protected until the officers arrived.

The fact that the basket was in the woods Friday proves without doubt that the child was there all night and was subjected to the heavy raius that fell shortly after dusk. Its clothing, cheap in texture and apparently handed down from some other babe, was soaking wet and the little body was as wet as if it had just been bathed.

The hiding place of the baby was about 100 yards from Keller Church. The spot is not a secluded one by any means, and would hardly have been selected as a daylight hiding place. For that reason it is believed by police officers that the child was not one was seen near the hiding place. Friday, it is practically certain that the heartless parents deserted their child Thursday night.

As soon as the officers returned to Coscord with the child they had it examined by a physician of the city, w cord with the child they had it examined by a physician of the city, who express-ed the opinion that the child was not over two days old and would live. In the opinion of the physician the baby was not fatally exposed and with proper care he expects it to rally and become a normal child. The fact that the little one is not more than two days old indicates that it probably was born Thursday morning and was carried that night to the woods to die or be picked up by some person with more pity than its par-some person with more pity than its parents.

After having the child examined and being told that it should be taken in charge by some woman, Assistant Chief of Police Widenhouse carried it to his home and left it with Mrs. Widenhouse. Dry clothing in abundance was furnished the infant, who showed signs of vigorous life after being warmed and fed, and who soon slept in peace on the lap of his adopted mother.

So far police officers are without clues that would assist in the hunt for the parents of the child, but everything possible will be done in an effort to locate the couple that deserted the babe.

Berlin, Nov. 24 (While awaiting word from President Ebert as to his plans for the government that is to succeed the defeated Stresemann ministry, political leaders this morning were discussing several possibilities the situation contained.

The nature of the new government remained a mystery overnight, and observers were wondering whether the President would try another parliamentary ministry or whether he would decide upon a restricted. The socialists late last night let it be known they would be "benevolently neutral" toward a conlition representing the clericals, the democrats and the German peoples party, but they made it plain they would not approve the inclusion of non-partisan experts in such a ministry.

In view of the political difficulties experienced by Chancellor Stresemann in dealing with reichstag, some party leaders felt dissolution of the national legislature was the only alternative to a popular coalition. The radical leaders, however, were continding that the President should make every effort to secritit a government from parliamentary sources.
