Extra Dress

The dresses sketched are made in two-piece style, skirts attached to underwaists and blouses that slip over one's head or button down the front. Wool jersey is ideal for school dresses, being warm and durable. Flannel and serge are the alternatives. Blue and brown are the favorite colors, and bright red is decidedly popular.

Blackwelder-Ridenour.

Ridenour on East Corbin street. With Miss Lillian Cline at the piano Mr. C. J. M. Blume, brother of the bride, sang "At Dawning," after which the bridal party entered to the strains of Lohengrin's Wedding March.

Rev. L. A. Thomas, pastor of the bride and groom, took his place at the altar, which was decorated with ferns and ivy and lighted with candles. The bride's only attendant was little Miss Helen Grady, cousin of the bride, dressed in pink crepe de chine, carrying the ring in a white rose. The bride and groom entered together. The ring ceremony of the Lutheran Church was used. The bride wore a lovely one piece dress of blue and grey crepe combined with accessories to match, and wearing a corsage of pink rosebuds.

The proprietor of a small medium priced hotel recently installed as night clerk his brother, a big, burly, raw Irishman, fresh from Ireland. He instructed him carefully as to his duties, being very particular in telling him that he should not neglect to call the roomers in the different rooms at the time specified upon the register, according to "Judge."

Dennis the new clerk was also bell-boy, and from five in the morning he was as busy as a bee rousing the roomers, No. 47 at 5:10, No. 42 at 5:20 and so on. Around six o'clock was his busy season. He was going up and down the halls, rapping and bellowing in a voice not very mild, when the door of room thirty opened and a man stepped out. Dennis looked at his list, and there, sure enough, was room No. 30 to be called at eight o'clock.

"Aren't you the man who left the call for eight o'clock?" Dennis asked. "Yes," answered the man, "but I had a good sleep and as it's a nice morning I thought I would go out for a walk." "Oh, no; not all, my fine man," said Dennis, grabbing him not very gently by the arm and marching him back to room No. 30 and pushing him in. "You stay there till eight o'clock, me bucko. If you wanted to go out at six o'clock, why didn't you have it down in the book?"

A brawny Irishman leaned over the big glass case in the chemist's shop and asked: "Wud ye please give me something to kill motha?" and was promptly supplied with a packet of camphor balls. He soon returned red with anger. "Ar-re you the monkey-faced piece that sowed me these balls?" shouted the ruffled one. "Just you come home wid me an' if ye can hit a single moth with one of these little pellets, I'll spare ye the thrashin' ye'll get otherwise to say nothing about the lookin'-glass an' ornaments meessal an' the missus broke."

MONROE DOCTRINE CENTENNIAL

Tomorrow is the One Hundredth Anniversary of the Famous Message. Washington, D. C. Dec. 1.—Tomorrow will be the one hundredth anniversary of President Monroe's famous message to Congress on the subject of the rights and interests of the United States on the American continent, which has become known in history as the "Monroe Doctrine."

During the past few months many public meetings have been held in various parts of the country for the discussion and eulogium of the immortal document and tomorrow there will be more meetings in celebration of the centennial. Probably the most notable of these will be held at Richmond, Va., where a program of addresses by eminent speakers will be followed by a pilgrimage to the grave of President Monroe in Hollywood cemetery.

The Monroe Doctrine marked an important epoch in the history of the United States. It was the first assertion of the independent sovereignty of the republic in a form to attract the attention of the whole world. It marked the country's emergence from the condition of experiment, and its assumption of a power reaching beyond its own door.

President Monroe, in his message to Congress, proclaimed the famous doctrine in the following words: "We owe it to candor, and to the amicable relations existing between the United States and those great European Powers, to declare that we should consider any attempt on their part to extend their system to any portion of this hemisphere as dangerous to our peace and safety. With the existing colonies and dependencies of any European Power we have not interfered, and shall not interfere; but with the governments who have declared their independence and maintained it, and whose independence we have on great considerations and on just principles acknowledged, we could not view any interposition for the purpose of oppressing them, or controlling in any other manner their destiny, by any European Power, in any other light than as a manifestation of an unfriendly disposition towards the United States."

The occasion of President Monroe's message was the suggestion of an intention on the part of the "Holy Alliance" of European monarchial Powers to extend its beneficent offices to the American continent by undertaking to place once more the revolted Spanish colonies under the power of Spain.

It has often been noted that the message of Monroe followed an invitation by Mr. Canning, British foreign minister, for a joint declaration by England and the United States adverse to the interference of any other European Power in the contest between Spain and her colonies. No official announcement ever served more immediately, more distinctly, or apparently more abidingly, the purpose for which it was designed. It set at rest for all time the activities, whether intended or merely latent in the general policies of those countries, of the European Powers involving interference or extension on the American continent. That it should have been so instantly and so implicitly accepted in America was undoubtedly due in large part to its agreement with the principle enunciated by Washington in his Farewell Address. In truth, the Farewell Address was the father of the Monroe Doctrine.

The Doctrine was affirmed more and more clearly as the years went by. President Cleveland may be said to have nailed it down by his action with regard to Venezuela and by the declarations contained in his celebrated message of December 17, 1895.

The principal crops of Japan in the order of their importance are rice, barley, rye, wheat, tobacco and tea. Of these the rice crop is by far the largest, being nearly 60 per cent. of the whole.

REV. S. M. DAVIS DEAD

IN BED AT CAROLEEN
Sainted "Circuit Rider" Was Beloved By All and Thousands Knew Him. Shelby, Dec. 1.—Rev. S. M. Davis, pioneer Methodist preacher, widely known religious writer and one of the few remaining historic "circuit riders" of the state, was found dead in his bed this morning at the home of his niece in Caroleen. The funeral services will be conducted tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 p. m. at the Methodist church, this county, by Rev. Z. Paris and Rev. Mr. Hornbuckle, of Caroleen.

Rev. Mr. Davis, who was 76 years of age, became a circuit rider in the combined North and South Carolina conference something over a half century ago. His first charge, which he served for six years, was the Darlington circuit composed of 15 churches. Later he served many charges in the North Carolina conference and later still in the Western North Carolina conference.

Nineteen years ago he was forced to retire from the active ministry, but he never ceased the work to which he devoted his life. His sermons and well written religious articles have appeared regularly in many papers throughout the state.
