"Yes," Mr. Vanderlip continued. "Val the inferences were in these runnors that low much was paid for the paper, but I never said anybody connected with the oil business had paid any money in the transaction. I hoped that by bringing out the slander you gentlemen on this committee would get at the truth and clear the memory of President Harding."

He regarded the rumors, he said, as akin to the "whispering campaign" that marked the last month of the Harding campaign in 1920.

"I had full basis for what I said," he continued, "that these were current rumors."

Asked why he did not come to the committee first Vanderlip said he did not assume that the oil committee was interested in the sale of newspapers.

The banker said he had heard rumors about the sale of the Star from many sources, but none of them who related to him claimed to know any facts.

"I believe it is important that these rumors be stopped. There is a distinct difference between rumors and gossip. When you get these things in responsible quarters you'd better look out."

"You'd have this committee believe your only purpose was to clear Mr. Harding's memory?"

"It was."

Owing to the impossible gestrictions and discourtesies on the part of the Public Works Department and its antiquity section all my collaborators, in protest, have refused to work any further upon the scientific investigation of the discovery of the tomb of Tutnnkahmen. I am therefore obliged to make known to the public that immediately after the press view of the tomb, between 10 o'clock and noon, the tomb will be closed and no further work will be carried out.

The news that Mr. Carter had descided to close the tomb came like a thunderbolt.
