The building is furnished throughout with patent desks, teachers' desks and a splendid piano. The library contains 300 volumes.
Mr. Ed. B. Joyner is finishing out his fifth year as principal of the school. Mr. Joyner has worked untiringly in his efforts to build up the school and make it a source of the greatest usefulness in the community. Under his supervision the length of term has been lengthened from five and a half to eight months. The enrollment has grown steadily until there are now about two hundred and ten pupils enrolled. Mr. Joyner has this year fourteen pupils in his senior class, who will be ready for high school next year. And the great thing about the Brown-Norcott school is that most of the graduates do go to high school.
Mr. Joyner has as his assistants four of the finest young ladies to be found in the teaching profession anywhere. They are trained for their work, and enter into it in a whole-hearted fashion. They are: Miss Ethel Williams, teacher of the low first grade; Miss Sadie Moore, teacher of the second and third grades; and Mrs. J. M. Caldeasure, teacher of the fourth and fifth grades. Mr. Joyce teaches the sixth and seventh grades.
Miss Daisy Scarborough teaches the high second and third grades.
In addition to the regular curriculum, which embraces the first seven grades, there is a large class in music. About thirty of the girls receive instruction in "home hygiene and care of the sick." Each year a large number of the girls are enrolled in the "Little Mother" league. These girls learn all about the care of the baby. Every pupil in the Brown-Norcott school belongs to the Modern Health Crusade. Visitors to the school often remark "The cleanest bunch I've seen." Everybody there talks in terms of good-health. Each teacher teaches the weight of every pupil and carefully charts them. Dr. Buchanan and the county nurse have given their co-operation to the health work of the school in a very fine way.
Clubs for both the boys and girls are maintained through the efforts of the Concord Y. M. C. A. These clubs, the Eagles and the Bluebirds, meet twice a week for athletics and all kinds of games and fun of the right sort and Christian citizenship training.
Nor is the spiritual life of the pupils overlooked. The teachers and Y. M. C. A. leaders talk Sunday school. The pupils go, one hundred per cent, to Mr. Joyner's leads in memorizing Bible selections. Already this year the entire school has memorized seven select chapters from the Bible, besides many important verses and quotations.
Nest's-Foot Oil.
Nest's-foot oil is obtained from the feet of such animals, as oxen and sheep. It is commercially valuable as an industrial oil, because it remains liquid at a freezing temperature, and it can therefore be used in lubricating exposed machinery. Nest's-foot oil is pale yellow and is practically odorless.
Japanese Lawmakers.
The Japanese parliament is modeled after that of Great Britain, but its spirit is entirely different. In Japan debates in parliament are pleasant occasions where men of second rank were permitted to display themselves. The leader of a party may not even have a seat in the chamber.

THE BROWN-NORCOTT SCHOOL

A Story of Hard Work, Perseverance and Success.
Concord Y. Concord.
The Brown-Norcott School is situated on the high hill just across the old Charlotte road from the County Home. The location commands an extensive view of the Brown-Norcott mill village and the city of Concord.
Seven or eight years ago nothing was heard of this school, because there was nothing to say about it except that it was about the poorest excuse for a school to be found in Cabarrus County. Then the awakening came about.
The first decided improvement in the school was in 1917, when Superintendent Robertson built a modern school building, which has been enlarged as the enrollment increased. The building now has five classrooms, three of which may be thrown together for public exercises, library, music room, and suitable cloak rooms.
The building is furnished throughout with patent desks, teachers' desks and a splendid piano. The library contains 300 volumes.
Mr. Ed. B. Joyner is finishing out his fifth year as principal of the school. CIRCUS DAY APPROACHES.

Concord Y. Concord.
The young folks of Concord are already on their toes looking for April 25th to roll around. April 25th means much to the youngster, and to most of the older folks as well; for it is circus day, and that day always starts something going in the kiddies' heads; and the older folks simply follow suit to keep up a custom that they formed when they were youngsters themselves.
Visions of the long-tailed grampus and the six-legged whif-poop will always stick with the kids that have grown up, and therefore the streets are always crowded for the big grand and free "peerade."
The greatest of all circuses will arrive in Concord April 25th. This big combination known universally as The Combined Adam Highbow and Barndoor Railway Ringless Circus is owned and operated by the Ringtail Brothers and has been a wonderful success from the time these wonderful brothers were kicking around the outside of the Big Top looking for a chance to slip under the canvas, without incurring the canvasman's trusty club.
This greatest of all circuses has eighty-nine car loads of animals and paraphernalia and a troupe of over five hundred and twenty-three actors, freaks, showmen, clowns and roustabouts. The show may have to be reduced to a one-ring circus on this occasion as there is not enough room on the sidings and not enough loafers, and spare hands to help with the unloading and necessary rubbernecking that is required for the average three or four or five ring circus. The wonderful collection of animals and performers have been gathered from all parts of the world and Kannapolis. The selfsame animals have caused many restless nights for the other circus owners in this country, for they have tried to capture them but without avail.

GRAND MAY DAY FETE.

Concord Y. Concord.
The local Y. is planning through the Hi Y. Girls' Club to stage the big pageant of the year on the lawn of the Y. May Day Preparations are now under way for at least three hundred characters faking parts both old and young people will have places as well as many very small children. One of the special features will be the Hoop Rolling Contest, the fairy scene with such noted characters as Robin Hood, Little Red Riding Hood, Mother Goose and the Big Shoe. Much mystery will surround the May Queen and her gorgeous court. One of the most beautiful pantomime's will be the Spider Weave around the May Pole.
Mr. Blanks, secretary of the Y. will begin enrolling applicants who wish to take part at an early date. Miss Hampton, teacher of expression, Miss Mary MacLaughlin, Mr. J. I. M. Smith, and a number of leaders in civic affairs, will help direct the preparation.

CAMP PREPARATIONS

Concord Y. Concord.
The Y. M. C. A. is preparing to find a camp that will suit the ideals of camp lovers. The camp will no doubt be located in the mountains of North Carolina, and will probably be in the mountains near Virginia above the Dan River section. The altitude here is as high or higher than that around Asheville and the country is almost a wilderness and its beauty is not to be differed anywhere in the State of North Carolina. The living conditions have not been spoiled by great numbers of tourists and camping is favored by the weather in this section more than any other spot in this part of the country. The climate is ideal; the scenery beautiful. The water cannot be equalled anywhere. The natives are the best and the country as rich with camping lore and requirements as any to be found anywhere. Here is to the success of our finest-of-all camping seasons. A committee will inspect the section of country in question and will choose the site to be used.

Conquest Mine.
The deep, mine in the world is in Brazil at St. John del Rey. It has attained a vertical depth of 6,720 feet. At that depth the temperature of the rock is 147 degrees Fahrenheit, necessitating a system of artificial cooling. The gold-bearing ore at the bottom shows no signs of decreasing in volume.

FOOT HEALTH TALKS

Pains at the Ball of the Foot

Have you ever realized how delicately fitted to the bone, nerve, and muscular system of the foot is the foot? In this article Dr. Scholl tells us what there is in the foot that makes it so delicate.

By WILLIAM M. SCHOLL, M.D.
Noted Foot Orthopedist and Editor of "The Foot Specialist."

Not long ago an elderly gentleman came to me complaining of severe pains and cramps in the forepart of the foot. At times, he became so severe, he said, that he was forced to immediately remove his shoes, and rub and massage the toes before he obtained relief.

Examination revealed that he suffered from what I had suspected, metatarsalgia, pain in the forepart of the foot. Callusities had formed over the depressed bones. He could not sustain his weight on the ball of his foot without agonizing pain which ran through the foot, thigh, and back.

The immediate cause of the trouble was a depression of the metatarsal bones which form a cross-wise arch in the forepart of the foot. The bones had been crowded down, lumping upon the delicate branches of the digital nerves which control the delicate motion and blood vessels in this part of the foot. I immediately prescribed specially fitted surgical plates or arch supports to restore the arch to its normal position, and thus relieve the congestion and pressure upon the nerves. I fitted the arch supports to his feet and was surprised to see that in a few minutes he could jump upon the ball of his foot; whereas I had only asked him if he could now lace any weight upon it. In two weeks or so he returned again; and the arch supports were refitted to his improved condition. He had no further trouble.

This was quite a typical case for though metatarsalgia is a very frequent foot trouble, it is rarely recognized until a severe stage of pain is reached. Mechanical support and correction of the weakened arch is the only form of treatment that has proved successful. As Dr. Lorenz, the famous Viennese orthopedist, pointed out, the bones of the arch would drop of their own weight unless supported by the ligaments and muscles. When they are restored to normal position, the pressure upon nerve fibres is relieved, and usually the congestion disappears rapidly. Often gentle exercises and massages are prescribed to help tone up the tissues and muscles. The bones in the forepart of the foot are very delicate, especially when we consider that they help to support the heavy human body. The nerve system of this part of the foot is complex and highly organized. The metatarsal arch itself gives elasticity to the forepart of the foot; absorbs shock when the body's weight is thrown upon it or when the weight is shifted from one side of the foot to the other. It is the cross-wise or transverse arch in the forepart of the foot and can be plainly seen on the under side of the ball of the foot, defined by the little and great toes. Of course, when this delicate mechanism is cramped and crowded into short and narrow-toed shoes, something is bound to give way. Sprains, sudden wrenching, jumping upon the toes, or excessive standing when the weight is carried upon the ball of the foot and the muscles of the arch are overstrained may weaken or destroy the arch.
