

Ward's Orange-CRUSH

Lime-CRUSH and Lemon-CRUSH

"Just taste it— It's awf'ly good!"

When Tom shares his bottle of Ward's Orange-Crush with Little Sister, he's making a big sacrifice. For no one knows so vividly as he how good it tastes—to the last drop.

When there's such a delicious difference between the genuine and imitations, it pays to be insistent. Call for an Orange-Crush today—look for the Krinkly Bottle—and—be sure you get it!

Ward's Crushes are more than merely delicious—they are wholesome and have real food value. Read our formula. Here it is: To the natural fruit oils of oranges, lemons and limes are added citrus fruit juices, carbonated water, fruit acid, U. S. Certified food color and pure cane sugar.

The "Krinkly Bottle" insures a good drink—identifies the genuine, too

OUR Y IN ACTION.

It has been my good fortune to study the workings of the Y. M. C. A. at close range from many angles in some of the larger cities of this and other states. I am frank to say that they are not all alike in all particulars. Some of them did not measure up to the title and spirit of the "Y" was lacking. Others were it all the name implied. Analyzing the difference I have come to the conviction that it was the Man. Some would call it atmosphere, some influence, and that would be true. But that influence or atmosphere is the effect of a personality. If that person is a deeply spiritual Christian the atmosphere is that brooding kind that grows the finest things in character building.

For the Concord "Y" I am happy to say that the atmosphere is right. I am convinced that Secretary Blanks is doing everything in his power to put Christ in the program of the institution, and I am persuaded that he is entitled to the very best support and hearty co-operation in his efforts to make it safe for the youth of our good city. After more than five years of toil for the uplift of the morals of the city I am perfectly sure he cannot do his best work without the sympathetic support—both moral and financial, of the best people of the city. In this time when youthful criminals seem to be on the increase in the land every thoughtful citizen ought to hail with delight the opportunity to make a cash contribution to the support of so worthy a program as that now in operation at the "Y." While the "Y" can never take the place of home or the church in character building it can greatly aid these. This is just what our "Y" aspires to do for us under the present management. It is eminently worth while and I most heartily commend the work to my people and others. I hope the campaign for current funds will be a complete success from every consideration.

THE Y. M. C. A. A REAL ASSET.

The community's best assets are its Christian forces. Without these no community is safe.

Therefore among the real assets in this community is the Young Men's Christian Association.

This scribe has not been a citizen of this little city for a great while, but long enough to note the real worth of this organization.

Furthermore it has been my observation—and I have had considerable opportunity to observe—that the Y. M. C. A. is the more effective for good in proportion to the way it is directed and controlled. Then the local organization is to be measured by the personnel of its officers. Concord is exceedingly fortunate, it appears to me, in the forces now in control of the Y. M. C. A.

If Concord will maintain the present way of operating this organization there will come untold benefits in the years to come. To be sure, it takes brain, time, energy and money to put over this kind of a program, and if we act wisely we will use these means to encompass the desired end.

Having lived in Charlotte for a number of years, also Greensboro, and am well acquainted with Asheville, may I be permitted to bear testimony to the real worth of the Y. M. C. A., and any town or city is fortunate in having within its midst a live, wide-awake organization that ministers to its young life. Let's stand nobly by the Y. M. C. A., in our midst.

Very sincerely,
LEE A. FALLS.

RELIGIOUS FREEDOM AND THE DEMOCRATIC PARTY.

New York World.

Senator Underwood, of Alabama, announced that he will carry to the floor of the Democratic convention a plank reaffirming the opposition of the Democratic party to "all secret political societies, by whatever name they may be called," and declaring, as in 1856:

"That the foundation of this Union of States having been laid in, and its prosperity, expansion, and pre-eminent example in free government built upon, entire freedom in matters of religious government, and no respect of person in regard to rank or place of birth, no party can justly be deemed national, constitutional, or in accordance with American principles which bases its exclusive organization upon religious opinions and accidental birthplace."

This is a line on which the Senator from Alabama can afford to fight to the bitter end. For the Democratic party cannot go before the people of this country until its record on religious freedom is absolutely plain. The issue made by the Ku Klux Klan strikes at the root of American institutions. The Democratic party can neither yield to the Klan nor sidestep the issue. It must, if it is to continue as a national party, meet the issue squarely.

The World hopes, and has often suggested, that the issue of the Klan will be taken out of national politics by an identical declaration in all party platforms. That would be the patriotic and the wise thing to do at Cleveland and at New York, and elsewhere a party convention may be held. But whatever the Republicans desire to do, the duty of the Democracy is perfectly plain.

The World is quite well aware how ardently the political managers of many candidates would like to dodge the question. Every man afraid of his shadow, every politician attempting to carry water on both shoulders, will advise silence. Party harmony will be employed as an excuse for evasion. Politicians will whisper in one another's ears that the situation in their districts makes it inexpedient just now.

To those for whom the principle of religious freedom is not a sufficient reason the World addresses an argument that they will understand. It reminds them that the Democratic party can win only by carrying northern and eastern states. A Democratic party branded with Ku Klux can say goodbye to New York, New Jersey, Indiana, Ohio, Illinois, Massachusetts, Maryland. Without several of those states the Democratic party cannot win.

Branded with the Ku Klux, the Democratic party in the North and East would cease to count as a national party. It would have lost its soul and its body. It would become a sporadic faction without principle, without national influence, without hope of victory.

Let there be no mistake in the minds of the delegates who assemble at Madison Square Garden in June. The banner which Senator Underwood raises will gather behind it the real fighting strength of the party, the strength of those men on whom victory in November depends. They are not agreed on a candidate, nor do they seek to dictate the choice of a candidate. What they ask is that the party shall first come clean on the religious issue, and thus be free to make its choice.

It will not be free otherwise. The party may, for example, have good grounds for not wishing to nominate Gov. Smith. But unless it has first made its record perfectly straight on the Underwood resolution the country will never believe that Gov. Smith failed for any other reason than the religious one. No candidate, be he Carter Glass, Joe T. Robinson, John W. Davis, or Samuel Ralston, can accept a nomination with any hope of success if by hook or crook he is made the beneficiary of religious intolerance. In the state where he most needs votes he would be defeated for that alone.

The World, therefore, on the grounds of political expediency and of principle, joins with Senator Underwood in calling upon the Democratic party to reaffirm its historic position on religious freedom.

Many Applicants For Salisbury School Job.

Salisbury, May 17.—The elimination of the seventy applicants for the position of superintendent of the schools of this city has brought the remaining number to be considered down to twelve and the City Board of Schools will meet on Tuesday next to select the new superintendent. The twelve remaining applicants will visit Salisbury and be interviewed personally by the board, Colonel A. H. Boyden, chairman of the board, stated.

Applicants came from every state from Virginia to Texas, it was said, and it was pointed out that this shows how people in the educational field in other states feel about schools in North Carolina. The superintendency of the Salisbury city schools was made vacant by the resignation of T. Winzate Andrews, who was also secretary of the school board. Mr. Andrews has accepted the superintendency of the High Point schools and goes to that city on July 1st, next.

Belled Buzzard in Georgia Recalls Story, Asheville, May 17.—A few days ago a rather insignificant appearing item in a local newspaper recorded the fact that over a point in Georgia.

Probably many persons read the story and attached no particular interest to the account, while others may have dismissed the subject with the remark, "Just a newspaper story."

But so with H. T. Devine, 99 Jefferson Drive, who believes he "has the goods" on that old buzzard.

Fifty-five years ago Mr. Devine, then living in Warren county, witnessed the capture of a young buzzard by two boys, Nat Bobbitt and Sid Alston. Then a buzzard was protected by State laws which imposed a fine of $10 for killing one of the scavenger birds. But Bobbitt and Alston had a great thought, "Let's bell him," said Bobbitt, "and we may hear of him again."

Accordingly the two lads attached a bell to one of the buzzard's feet, and turned him loose. Several months later they heard he had been seen in Georgia. Mr. Devine said a buzzard is supposed to live to be 100 years old unless something happens to end his normal cycle of existence. The old buzzard seen in Georgia the other day may not be the bird to which Bobbitt and Alston tied the bell more than half a century ago, but then again he may be—so there you are.
