ICE BILLS

INFERIOR REFRIGERATOR

THE FIRST COST

Of an inferior refrigerator is small, but how about the ice bills you will have to pay every summer. Buying a refrigerator is like buying an automobile. Not so much the original cost, but the upkeep, with an inferior refrigerator, poorly insulated and ill fitting doors, you will waste enough ice in one or two summers to pay for a good refrigerator.

This is Refrigerator weather, and our stock of Baldwins and Automatics is going fast. See these refrigerators and ice boxes before you buy. Terms if you like.

LOCAL MENTION

Cotton on the local market today is quoted at 28 1/2 cents per pound.

Mrs. W. F. Goodman entered the Concord Hospital this morning for treatment.

The condition of little Miss Willene Swink, who underwent an operation Monday for the removal of her tonsils is improving nicely.

Mrs. Vic Widenhouse and children have returned to their home after spending several days with her sister, Mrs. Zeb Joyner, of York, S. C.

The condition of Mrs. J. A. Praetner, who underwent an operation last week for the removal of her tonsils, is reported as improving very satisfactory now.

Marriage license has been issued by Register of Deeds, Elliot, to Robert Lee Wilkinson and Miss Eursley Lee Swain, both of Kannapolis.

Mr. and Mrs. R. P. Gibson are now living in their new home on South Union Street, having moved into the handsome new home several days ago.

The weekly meeting of the Concord Rotary Club will be held at the Y. M. C. A. tomorrow at 12:30 p. m. President Hartzell will preside at the meeting.

It was announced Monday by an officer of the organization that the War Mothers meeting scheduled at first for this week has been postponed until next week. The meeting will be held next Tuesday, July 15th.

Frank Crowell, who managed the two King Tut service stations before they recently were purchased by the Standard Oil Co., will continue in the same position with the new owners of the stations.

Many expressions of regret were heard here today over the death of Calvin Coolidge, Jr. The fortune of the youth was closely watched as he fought a losing fight against the fatal poison, and deep sympathy was expressed for the bereaved parents when it was learned the youth was dead.

Members of the executive committee of the American Legion will meet tonight at 8 o'clock. At the meeting the committee members will decide on an expert to be engaged for several months in filling out the bonus applications for former service men of the county. The expenses of the expert will be paid from money donated by the city and county, each having given $150.

Judging from remarks heard on the streets here today many Concord people were awakened about the same time this morning. This is due to the terrible crash of thunder which followed a vivid flash of lightning about 6:20 o'clock this morning during an early morning thunder storm. A heavy rain accompanied the thunder and lightning, which continued about an hour.

The following new books are at the library now: "Polyana of the Orange Blossoms", by Smith, "Deep in the Heart of Me", by Walter, "The Black Hood", by Dixon, "Pandora Lifts the Lid", by Christopher Morley and Don Marquis, "Brood of the Witch Queen", by Rohmer. Also three of Mr. Norman's books. Mrs. Reed reported that more books were lent Saturday than any day in the past eight months.

Twenty defendants were tried in recorder's court here Monday and nineteen of them paid fines and costs totalling $245.70. The other defendant was charged with larceny in two counts and was sentenced to serve four months on the county chain gang. The docket for court Monday was unusually heavy, compared with those of the past several weeks when very few cases have been tried.

Only two matters not of a routine nature were presented to the county commissioners. One was selection of jurors to serve the third week of Cabarrus court in August and the other was a request for $150 to help the American Legion get bonus blanks for former service men filled out. The board granted the request of the Legion and selected the jurors, which can be found in another column of this paper.

Dr. S. E. Buchanan, county health officer, declared this morning that the county-wide typhoid fever campaign got off to a good start Monday. Mr. Buchanan and an assistant visited each of the scheduled places Monday and at each a number of persons were vaccinated against the disease. The program will be carried out just as announced throughout the campaign so long as enough interest is maintained to warrant it, Dr. Buchanan has declared.

Use of Irish Language Protested in Ireland.

Dublin, July 8.—Senator William Butler Yeats, the poet, spoke recently in the Senate against a bill which would compel railway companies to print their tickets and time tables in Irish.

"I have tried to learn Gaelic but failed," he confessed. "I have failed to learn any language except English, I am sorry to say."

Other Senators, referring to proposals to print whiskey labels in Irish, said 80 per cent of the population would not be able to read them.

DESIRE UNNAMED MAN AS NOMINEE

But Delegates Don't Know Who He Is; Prefer Both Smith and McAdoo. Mark Sullivan in Raleigh News and Observer.

New York, June 7.—That episode of the request from Smith manager that he be permitted to address the convention was interpreted by most of us with a good deal of confidence, as meaning that Smith must have intended to offer to withdraw if McAdoo would withdraw.

Smith could only have done two things, namely: make a stump speech commending himself highly for the Presidency, or else offer to withdraw provided McAdoo would do the same. Obviously, Smith has too much humor to do the former, and so we were obliged to infer he meant to do the latter.

If Smith had made this offer and backed it up with an attractive personality and with words of conciliation, compromise and encouragement to party—in that case it would have been "put up to" McAdoo pretty strong. Probably more than half the delegates would like to have both candidates out of the race. More than half would prefer some third candidate, though they may not agree on just who the third candidate is.

McAdoo Stronger Than Smith. As between McAdoo and Smith, McAdoo is clearly the stronger. If all the other candidates were out of the race, and if the convention were to vote on Smith and McAdoo and those two only, McAdoo would get about 620 delegates and Smith about 479.

That would give a majority to McAdoo, but considerably short of the necessary two-thirds. Smith, with his following, or to state it more broadly, the anti-McAdoo group—has more than the third necessary to veto McAdoo's nomination. So long as Smith stays in, McAdoo can't win. At least that is the situation so long as the Smith delegates stick. It is an endurance contest, in which the delegates do most of the enduring, and do it in those narrow little kitchen chairs, of which the seating capacity of the hall is made up.

The psychological attitude of the McAdoo group is one of demanding victory, of demanding the nomination and all that pertains thereto for William G. McAdoo. When they say they aren't thinking of a compromise they mean it. They want the nomination; they think their candidate is the strongest one; they think this entitles them to the nomination, and they propose to have it if they have to stick around all summer.

Ideal Candidate Unidentified. It is a fact that McAdoo has more delegates than any other one candidate. And yet it is safe to say that nearly half the convention would prefer some other candidate. But the name of that other candidate is "X," and the nature of him is a kind of composite ideal. Apparently "X" is not any one of the minor candidates or else the convention would have gone ahead and named him long ago. In the lack of a definite candidate rather than a composite "X" the convention adjourned with McAdoo further in the lead than ever before.

One of the main reasons why many of the delegates had begun to wish there were some other candidate available instead of McAdoo, was the feeling put in words over and over again, that after all this hauling and mauling the nomination wouldn't be worth much to either of the two main candidates who engaged in the mauling. But this does not necessarily follow. A few weeks after the convention is over, no one pays any attention to how it was gotten; always provided, of course, that there was nothing dishonorable in the getting of it. Interest will center in the candidate in interest will center in the candidate in the issues. McAdoo needs the hostile nomination of the convention. As to that seems most certainly his intention. Obviously Smith isn't the man to beat McAdoo with. On the contrary, it is the fact that the anti-McAdoo professional leaders chose Smith to beat McAdoo with—it is this—and the tactics they adopted that has cemented the loyalty of McAdoo's western and southern followers and made him strong. As to finding some one else to beat him with, all that is up to the delegates.
