

Davis to Carry Campaign Direct to The Country

Will Issue Series of Addresses—First Formal Conference With Newspaper Correspondents Held Today.

OTHER DETAILS ARE TO BE WORKED OUT Declined to Discuss Campaign Issues at This Time.—Will Sever His Connection With Law Business.

(By the Associated Press.) New York, July 10.—John W. Davis, Democratic candidate for President, intends to carry his fight direct to the country in a series of addresses, a number of which will be delivered in the West.

That part of his campaign plan was disclosed today in his first formal conference with newspaper correspondents, since his nomination yesterday by the Democratic National Convention. Other details remain to be worked out, in conference with party leaders.

Mr. Davis declined to discuss campaign issues at this time, explaining that such a discussion in advance of his formal notification would be premature. The time and place of this notification are still to be determined.

For the present, at least, Mr. Davis will make his headquarters at the home of Frank L. Polk, under-secretary of state in the Wilson administration, but determination has not yet been reached as to whether he will establish permanent headquarters in New York or West Virginia.

Mr. Davis said he expected to return to his home town of Clarkburg to greet his neighbors and friends in advance of his formal notification. He had accepted an invitation to attend a dinner of the American Bar Association tonight, at Philadelphia, but he cancelled this engagement immediately after his nomination.

Replying to inquiries, Mr. Davis said he would sever his connection with the law business. He is a member of the same firm that Grover Cleveland was when he was nominated for the third time.

Although he did not arrive until a late hour last night, Mr. Davis was about eight o'clock today, and in company with Mr. Polk visited the Waldorf Astoria Hotel, where he met the correspondents and later was in conference with Chairman Hull of the Democratic National Committee, and other party leaders.

It was not until today that the Presidential nominee met Governor Chas. W. Bryan, of Nebraska, his running mate. They were introduced as Mr. Davis entered the room where the Democratic National Committee met.

Governor Bryan was standing at the entrance talking with a group of friends, when Mr. Davis arrived with Mr. Hull, Senator Walsh of Montana, and other party chiefs. After the meeting of the committee, Mr. Davis returned to the home of Mr. Polk where he spent much of the day. Tonight he planned to return to his home at Locust Valley, Long Island. The Presidential nominee has made no plans for the immediate future, other than to obtain a needed rest. He said that like anyone else who had had anything to do with the convention, he was well worn out.

In a formal discussion among committee members and friends of the candidate developed virtually a unanimous agreement upon notification ceremonies for the Presidential nominee at Clarkburg, W. Va., Mr. Davis' home town, about three weeks hence.

Under the tentative plan presented to the committee today the reorganization will take place at that time. This plan, it was declared, will give party leaders ample opportunity to appraise the political situation in their own states before coming together for formal discussion of campaign plans and selection of the national chairman. Chairman Hull called the session to order and spoke briefly on the success of the convention in presenting a ticket of "strong, able candidates, whose records are tokens of democratic success" in November.

Holds Gavel-Breaking Record

The strong right arm of Senator Thomas Walsh sent countless gavels to the gavel factory during the Democratic convention. Since the problem of keeping the convention in order took plenty of gavel pounding he is credited with breaking more gavels than any other convention chairman on record.

NOTHING BUT IDLE TALK Walsh Declines Second Place on Davis Ticket

Montana Senator Refuses Vice Presidential Nomination. Madison Square Garden, July 9.—Senator Thomas J. Walsh, of Montana, facing with the Democrats national convention tonight, finally and definitely declined to accept the nomination for vice president.

Having chosen John W. Davis, of West Virginia, for the Presidential nomination after a 103-ballot contest, the Democratic national convention turned to the selection of a vice presidential candidate with the prospect that Senator Thomas J. Walsh, of Montana, permanent chairman of the convention, would decline the honor.

Chairman Walsh had the nomination in his hands at the close of the afternoon session of the convention when practically every delegate on the floor was on his feet demanding his nomination by acclamation before the convention recessed for the night session. But he even ruled out of order the delegate who proposed it, declaring that the convention should have time for reflection and deliberation. Further than that Senator Walsh actually adjourned the session when by a heavy majority of noes it was rejected a motion to adjourn so that it might remain and proceed to his nomination.

Bryan Behind Ticket; Cox Praises Davis. New York, July 9.—William Jennings Bryan, who openly and vigorously opposed the nomination of John W. Davis as the Democratic Presidential candidate, announced today after Mr. Davis had been nominated, that he would "support the ticket."

Mr. Bryan confided his comment on the convention's actions to these: "James M. Cox, of Ohio, the Democratic standard-bearer of 1920, and until the nomination of Mr. Davis the titular leader of the party, was loud in his praise of the party's candidate.

There Can Be No Compromise With Reaction, Davis Asserts

New York, July 9.—John W. Davis, as the Democratic Presidential nominee, declared in a statement late today: "There can be no compromise with reaction. Liberal principles must and will prevail. This is the mandate of the hour and I shall obey it."

Mr. Davis asserted that not the least of the weighty obligations that had fallen to him was "the duty to put before the country as clearly as my powers permit, the Democratic creed and Democratic policy as the convention has declared them." He said he had no doubt that this creed and this policy would receive "the militant support of all those who call themselves by the Democratic name."

"I shall hope to rally to their aid," he continued, "that great body of liberal, progressive and independent thought which believes that 'progress in motion, government in action,' which detests privilege in whatever form and which does not wish the American people or their government to stand still or retreat from the midst of a changing world."

"The history of national conventions may be searched in vain for one which has excelled this in freedom or frankness of discussion, or whose actions have been more clearly the result of the unfettered wishes of the assembled delegates. The resolution and endurance they have exhibited is but proof of their sense of the solemn responsibilities to the country under which they acted and of the supreme vitality of democracy."

"I cannot but feel deeply sensible of the honor done me by the convention and am even more conscious of the weighty responsibilities that have fallen to me by its deliberate and unanimous choice. Not least of these is the duty to put before the country as clearly as my powers permit, the Democratic creed and the Democratic policy as the convention has declared them."

"That this creed and this policy will receive the militant support of all those who call themselves by the Democratic name I do not doubt for an instant. I shall hope to rally to their aid that great body of liberal, progressive and independent thought which believes that progress is motion, government is action, which detests privilege in whatever form and which does not wish the American people or their government to stand still or retreat from the midst of a changing world."

"There can be no compromise with reaction. Liberal principles must and will prevail. This is the mandate of the hour and I shall obey it."

YOUNG COOLIDGE IS TODAY AT PLYMOUTH, VT.

His Former Playmates and Neighbors Tender Their Services This Morning in Last Sad Rites.

FUNERAL SERVICE AT NORTHAMPTON The Service in Washington Was Government's Tribute.—Today It Was the Tribute of Neighbors.

(By the Associated Press.) Northampton, Mass., July 10.—Former playmates and neighbors in the town where he was reared to the approach of manhood, tendered their services of respect this morning to Calvin Coolidge, Jr.

President and Mrs. Coolidge, who came from Washington with their dead, were consoled by the town folks of Northampton at the simple rites the family had wished. These were held at the Edwards Congregational Church, of which Calvin was a member.

This afternoon at Plymouth, Vt., over the road he had traveled on summer vacations to his grandfather's farm, the Presidential party was carrying the body of the sixteen-year-old boy to its burial place in the hillside cemetery where lies the mother of the President.

The service yesterday in Washington was the government's tribute; that today in Northampton was the familiar service in which old friends and neighbors participated. Rev. Kenneth B. Wells, pastor of the Edwards Congregational Church, said that in the memory and life of Calvin Coolidge, Jr., was found that which is best in the American boy, and he drew from the lesson of his life a message of hope.

After an organ prelude, Dr. Jason Noble Pierce of the First Congregational Church, in Washington, D. C., read the 21st and 23rd Psalms. The quartet that sang at the service in Washington yesterday, sang again today. The scripture reading was given by Rev. Dr. Pierce, who read from John 14, Corinthians 15, and Revelations 21.

The funeral train reached here at 1 o'clock this morning. The city halted business and traffic. The President and his family went to the Coolidge home. There they were met by Col. John C. Coolidge, father of the President, and Mrs. Andrew Goodhue, mother of Mrs. Coolidge. Both will accompany the Presidential party to Plymouth. It was also planned by the President to have his father return with the family to the White House.

The casket, under a new cover of fresh pink roses placed there this morning, remained in the compartment at the rear of the President's coach, until shortly before the time for the services. Church bells tolled as the funeral party arrived.

All of the President's immediate family rested comfortably on the all-night trip. Silent groups gathered along the railroad tracks and stood uncovered as the train came by the Connecticut Valley into Massachusetts. Factories stopped work and employees stood at attention. Northampton was unusually quiet.

The President had urged that the services here be simple, and the home folks sought to comply. Business was stopped by official proclamation between 8:30 and 10:30 o'clock. Main street was devoid of traffic.

The clear notes of the Smith College chimes were heard throughout the city during the funeral procession and services. "Onward Christian Soldiers" and "The Son of God Goes Forth to War" were among the hymns played.

The President's family went from the home to the church alone, and were met by the funeral procession at the church door. The buildings already were filled with home folks.

Mrs. Coolidge, slightly more drawn than yesterday, but perfectly composed, went into the church with the President. Behind them were John and his grandfather, and immediately following them Mrs. Goodhue and Mr. and Mrs. Frank W. Stearns. Then followed the cabinet members and their wives. The President and Mrs. Coolidge sat in the front row of the center seats, immediately in front of the casket.

The funeral train left here for Ludlow, Vt., at 10:30 a. m. From Ludlow the party will proceed by automobile to Plymouth, where simple burial services will be held at the grave in the cemetery on the hill, where the Coolidges have been buried for four generations.
