Prelate Says Many Stumble Over the Miracles in Scriptures.

London, Sept. 19.—"The conflict between science and religion is still far from heigr reconciled," said Very Rev. W. R. Ingle, the "gloomy dean of St. Paul's," in his presidential address at the Conference of Modern Churchmen, Oxford.

"It is an open sore," continued Dean Ingle, "that poisons the spiritual life of the civilized world. It is difficult for a man to accept orthodox Christianity, as it is presented by the churches, without treachery to his scientific conscience. "The injury thus inflicted upon religion can hardly be measured. The result is that intellectual honcety is largely drained out of the church, and public opinion within it does not reflect either the best knowledge or the most candid temper of the community.

"The question of miracles is for many the meaning of the conflict between religion and science."

Raleigh, Sept. 19.—Calling President Coolidge a "sphinx," deriding the republican administration for the corruption and inefficiency which he said was uppermost in its actions, and comparing the catering of the republicans to the special privilege classes to the work of the democrats for all the people, Seneator Pat Harrison of Mississippi, whom Governor Morrison in introducing him said was the "most elequent champion of Democracy in the South," told approximately 5,000 people crowded in the city auditorium here last night, that John W.
Davis was sure to lead the Democratis back to power in November, with the ideals of Woodrow Wilson as his gnide.
At every mention of the name of Woodrow Wilson the building sounded and resounded with applause.

Jury Orders Bost Held For Vanderburg's Death

was lying, and that he did not see the axe.

While Bost has made no statement concerning the shooting since he has been in jail it was definitely known that he was going to plead self defense, so evidence to this effect submitted at the hearing did not come as a surprise. It was not generally known, however, that Vanderburg's relative was to testify about not seeing the axe and his testimony is taken as very important. It seems certain now that when the case is called the matter of the location of the axe will have considerable attention. For the contention of the defense it will be necessary to establish the fact that Vanderburg had no axe and that the axe on the night of the shooting was not at the point where it was found the next day.

Vanderburg's statement is considered the most important fact established in connection with the case. That its contents have not been made public indicates that the State intends to use the state that the State inten satisfied in their own mind that the shooting occurred at the home. Two small patches of blood were found on the porch, it is said, but Vanderburg is believed to have bled profusedly and investigations made by the State indicate that officers believe there should have been more blood on the porch or on the ground near the porch.

The funeral for Vanderburg was held this afternoon at 2 o'clock at Cold Springs Methodist Church. Interment was made in the cemetery of the Church. He is survived by a wife and eight children and other close relatives.

While the coroner's inquest was being held here Thursday afternoon quite a crowd gathered at the Bell & Harris Undertaking Parlors, where the inquest was conducted. The case has aroused general interest throughout the county and in the crowd that gathered for the inquest were many who knew both men intimately and who were drawn to the scene of the hearing by the hope that they would get some information that would throw light on the case.

corporation, owns the entire village of Gastonia, N. C.

Those who know the fextile situation in the south and in Gaston county know that this paragraph was the product of the wild imagination of some New York reporter for the Cleveland Plain Dealer. Reliable authorities in the textile trade in the northen centers know Gastonia and the mills of the country about as well, or perhaps better, than the natives. The reporter who missed the mark must have know or heard of little about the Loray section of Gastonia and then erroneously jumped to the wrong conclusion. Local officials of the Manville-Jenckes company are disposed to give the "horse laugh" to the imaginative reporter who sent out the to give the "horse laugh" to the imaginative reporter who sent out the
