Creeks and rivers in all parts of the county are running high now as a result of the recent steady and heavy rains. Following the long drought the rains of ten days ago caused little difference in the creeks as the ground soaked up most of the water, but the rains of the past several days have not been absorbed and as a result they have flooded many creeks and rivers in the county.

The defeat of the Yankees was the third at the hands of the Tigers, who although they have no chance at the pennant, are doing their best to help Washington. COME TO VINGTON'S CONCORD, N. C.

You owe it to yourself to come to Covington's occasionally to see what a dollar will do under pressure. Besides being the price maker of our city, this store is a sort of a curiosity shop and there's a legend if you don't find it elsewhere "Try Covington's", rather a dubious compliment to be sure, but it has a deeper meaning. Like the parrot, I repeat it, "Come to Covington's". P. S.—Have you seen C. Covington.

Conveniences in Other Homes I Would Like in Mine.

R. E. Hulleender in Progressive Farmer. Last autumn I was visiting a boy with whom I had gone to boarding school. His home is in North Carolina. I had a delightful time there, and was very much impressed by the many conveniences which the home contained.

This friend of mine met me at the train in a car. When we arrived at his home it had begun to grow dark but I was surprised when he turned a switch and lighted up the garage. We then went into the house where I was introduced to his parents—I had never met them—although I roomed with their son for two years. They were a pleasant old couple and gave me a hearty welcome, none of the "charmed to meet you" of polite society but a warm clasp of the hand and "I have heard my son speak of you so often." I felt at home from the first.

I had traveled some distance so I was ushered into a nice tile bathroom, from which I came very much refreshed. I did ample justice to the delicious supper—not dinner—which was spread, not served. The mother took some of the food direct from a fireless cooker which had kept it nice and warm. Bright electric lights from a home plant shed a glowing light which banished every shadow from the room.

After supper we went into the living room—not drawing room—where we heard some good selections on a phonograph. Then one of the daughters of the house rendered some sweet music on the piano. About this time we were interrupted by the ringing of the telephone. One of the neighbor boys wanted us to come over and hear some music from his radio which was equipped with a loud speaker.

It was not until next morning that I saw the convenience which I liked best. This was an electric washer in the basement of the house, run by the power that had given the lights the night before. Then and there I decided that an electric washer and lights were the first conveniences that I should have. These are the conveniences that I wish for and intend to have in my home.
